Going Down—Our Dollar
Going Up—Our Prices
Hitler's Birthday
The Dictator Crop
—By Arthur Brisbane—

ANOTHER BULL MARKET in Wall Street. Stocks that climbed high on Wednesday when Uncle Sam and his family slid off the gold basis, climbed still higher yesterday.

And again, as stock prices went up, the price of our dollar went down in foreign countries.

That need not worry us. What our dollar can buy here, not what foreigners think of it, is important to Americans.

If our money gets nearer to the value of other nations' money, that will help us to sell goods abroad. Our dollar, in the language of the day, has been too "high hat" for good business.

Some genius calculated, after the Stock Exchange closed yesterday, that the dollar is now worth 84 cents. That would be hard to prove. In any case, the dollar has been worth a great deal more than 100 cents for a long time.

Many foreigners say our departure from the gold standard will hold back "world recovery."

It has not held back recovery of stock prices, or farm and other products. Wheat, cotton, hay, silver, everything is going up. Americans can stand the dollar dropping in value if everything goes up in price. A majority of us haven't many dollars anyhow.

On Wednesday brokers sold 5,000,000 shares of stock. Yesterday they sold 7,130,000 shares, old times come back again. The wise will say what the Frenchman said, as he passed the sixth floor, having fallen from the tenth story: "C'est tres bien, pourvu que cela dure." "It is fine, if it only lasts."

Adolph Hitler, Germany's new chancellor, celebrated his 44th birthday yesterday, and practically all Germany celebrated with him. The national celebration, that went beyond any honor ever paid to Bismarck, Hindenburg or the Kaiser, was close to adoration.

The Prussian minister of justice, Hans Kerri, told the Prussian Diet:

"Hitler is the Holy Ghost."

And all over Germany, Hitler's political organizations erected shrines with his pictures in public halls, held services before them, thanking God for the gift to Germany of the Great Hitler.

With great interest, future history will study the early 20th century crop of dictators, the millions of human beings suddenly abandoning their effort at self-government and following the servile obedience of a political messiah. How many survivals will there be among the organizations thus built on one man's personality? Will Mussolini, Hitler, Kemal Pasha or Stalin remain in history as the man whose plan worked out?

The English King's embargo, shutting 80 per cent of all Russian imports out of England, dumfounds Russia, which needs to sell and get money for its various "plans." Russia calls back her commercial diplomats from London, to talk things over.

Conditions have changed since Ivan the Terrible. Angry because Queen Elizabeth wouldn't marry him, he drove out English merchants, to whom he had given all sorts of concessions and monopolies. Now England drives out Russian trade.

Russia cannot understand that England should make such a fuss about two ordinary Englishmen sentenced to jail. To take small individuals so seriously is not the Russian custom. When Peter the Great, traveling in Western Europe, saw strange instrument of torture he asked the king, entertaining him, to put some live men in the machinery and work it. When the king said that could be done only to criminals, Peter replied:

"Well, then, take anybody on my staff. I want to see those machines work."

While some have gone back to Wall Street, forgetting all about 1929, you will be interested to hear that many others have gone to farms, safer places in times of depression. The bureau of agricultural economics shows that since 1930 more than 2,000,000 Americans have left the cities for the farm. At least you can raise food there, and rent isn't high.

Fifty million Americans, young and old, that have learned by heart, "the boy stood on the burning deck," now learn with a shock from Professor Overstreet, who teaches philosophy in the College of the City of New York, that the Casabianca hero was a moron type, lacking "the intelligence to adapt himself to a changing situation."

In defense of that unfortunate boy, who obeyed his father's orders, defying the flames, Professor Overstreet might be reminded that all heroes that have stuck to their posts, in defiance of danger and death, failed to adapt themselves to changing situations.

CHAMPIONS IN OPENER AT FENWAY

Ruffing Choice of Yankees for American League Opener

By JOE CASHMAN

Off the cellar standard for the first time in a decade, our revivified Red Sox sent local baseball stock soaring to a new spring high for their season's home debut against the undefeated and world's champion New York Yankees at Fenway Park this afternoon.

With the weather man promising the first seasonable matinee of the campaign, the diamond interest reawakened by the Fenway flock's fine showing on the road and the presence of Babe Ruth & Co. furnishing the opposition are expected to attract 15,000 or more through the turnstiles before Jimmy Coughlin's band has finished tuning up for the parade to the flag pole.

Yes, there'll be a parade. And all the other opening day fixin's. Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins, new owners, refuse to be cheated out of any of the traditional entertainment at the first inaugural ever staged at their expense.

Mayor Curley will throw out the first ball. And there'll be more notables present than you can shake a stick at.

All this ought to be old stuff by now, since the Braves staged their debut days ago. It so happened, however, that the condition of the Wigwam surface at that time made a march impracticable. And since the day was Sunday most of the dignitaries who should have been there couldn't be.

So all the pomp and ceremony, so dear to the heart of your fan,

WOMAN SEIZED IN SHOE STRIKE

Reserves were rushed from Peabody police headquarters to quell a disturbance in a crowd of strikers in front of the Diamond-Gynkraut tannery. Two men were arrested for hurling stones at strikebreakers entering the plant.

A short time later the first woman to be taken in custody during the strike was seized by police in front of the Richard Young tannery. She had hurled a rock through the windshield of a truckload of strikebreakers. She gave her name as Mrs. Helen Hornopoulos, 55, of Peabody.

The arrested men gave their names as Arnold Wolzzik, 35, of Lynn, and Mike Werenaszcick, 45, of Peabody. Both are strikers. They will be charged with assault in Peabody court today.

In Lynn and Danvers strikers were out in force, but maintained order. The situation in Peabody remained tense, however.

The situation between manufacturers and strikers is now at a deadlock. Manufacturers are carrying on operations with the aid of strikebreakers, imported from outside.

KIDNAP GANG FREE SON OF PROMOTER

Capone Leader, Aid in Search for Youth, Is Held

Chicago, April 21 (INS)—Jerome Factor, 19-year-old University student, who was kidnaped nine days ago and held for $50,000 ransom, was released by his abductors early today, apparently unharmed.

Unshaven and apparently dazed after his period of captivity, the son of John "Jake the Barber" Factor, millionaire stock promoter, appeared at 2:30 a. m. at the apartment of his mother, Mrs. Leonard Marcus.

CAPONE LEADER HELD

Police began an immediate investigation of the part the Al Capone gang played in the negotiations. Detectives took into custody Sam "Golf Bag" Hunt, Capone syndicate leader, enlisted by Factor in the search.

It was in the vestibule of his mother's North Side apartment house that the youth was seized a week ago Wednesday.

The youth appeared exhausted and his mother hastily summoned a physician. A heavy growth of beard covered young Factor's face and his features bore the marks of adhesive tape with which his eyes had been bandaged during the whole period of his captivity.

"Jake" Factor, who is accused of swindling British investors of $7,000,000, completed negotiations last night for his son's release, but refused to say whether all or part of the $50,000 ransom demanded had been paid. Police, however, were convinced a portion of the ransom demand had been met.

PHONES FATHER

Young Factor rode to his mother's home in a taxicab. Reluctantly he divulged that his abductors had driven him to a location near the apartment house and put him out of their auto with a warning not to remove the tape from his eyes until they had departed.

The youth telephoned his father's hotel suite and talked with Joseph A. Bleet, Factor's business associate.

"You can expect your father at the house any minute now," Bleet said.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the state's attorney staff hurried to the Marcus home to question the youth.

Ten suspects were in custody when young Factor returned home. Six of these were believed by police to be members of a southern Illinois kidnaping ring. Four of the prisoners were taken in custody by federal secret service agents yesterday when they raided a Chicago apartment.

BANDIT SHOT IN DOWNTOWN GUN BATTLE

Companion Pinned in Wrecked Car Fleeing From Police

James F. Johnson, 29, alleged member of the Gustin gang, was killed by a police bullet early today, and a companion, Coleman Foley, 35, of Branton st., Dorchester, was sent to the City Hospital dying after a chase from Summer st. to Harrison ave. and Dover st., South End.

Both, according to police, are members of the "wrench bandits" who have preyed on downtown stores during early morning hours.

The pair were first sighted in the doorway of Tuttle's millinery store at Chauncy and Summer sts., when Patrolmen Andrew K. Adair and George Burke of the Milk St. Station approached in a police car.

FIRES FROM CAR

The man, who later was killed, was applying a wrench to the front door of the store when Burke approached and Adair stayed at the wheel of the police car.

Johnson first believed that he was cleaning brass, but suddenly leaped from the doorway, ran around the corner in a car in which the motor was running and joined Foley, who was seated at the wheel.

With Burke emptying his revolver from the running board of the police car, the two machines raced at a 65-an-hour clip through Chauncy st., across Essex and through Harrison ave., to Dover st.

Burke was unable to hit the tires of the speeding car, but the pursued machine skidded as it passed Dover st. and crashed into a pole 100 feet beyond.

PINNED IN WRECKAGE

Johnson, his head bleeding as a result of the crash, leaped from the wrecked machine and darted into a alley near the Bristol st. fire-house.

Patrolman Adair fired, and the bullet ploughed through Johnson's back and emerged at the chest. Foley was pinned in the wreckage of the pursued machine. Johnson was still alive when he reached City Hospital, but died a few minutes later. His home is in Pierce ave., Dorchester.

Foley regained consciousness long enough to identify himself, and police found he was driving a car registered to a relative who lives in Mora st., Dorchester. Cuts on the face required 26 stitches and he suffered a fracture of the skull as injuries to his legs and body.

Johnson, according to police records, is the same who was captured March 17, 1931, when he ran his car onto the steps of Park St. Church in daylight chase that led from Washington and Franklin sts. At that time he was charged with larceny of $1000 worth of store goods.

Both are married. Foley was visited at the hospital shortly after the shooting by his young wife. He failed to recognize her.

Macon Gets Away On 12-Hour Tryout

Akron, O., April 21 (AP)—The U. S. Macon, sister ship of the wrecked Akron, took off on her maiden flight at 5:59 today. She will be up 12 hours in the first of a series of test flights preliminary to her acceptance of the navy.

The silvery ship, almost a duplicate of the Akron which crashed at sea with a loss of 73 lives early this month, headed into the northeast breeze 25 minutes after Capt. A. R. Dreesl gave the signal to walk the 785-foot-long vessel out of her dock.

Among those on board were officials of the naval board of inspection and Dr. Karl Arnstein, designer of both the Akron and Macon.

The takeoff came after 10 days of waiting for favorable weather since the world's largest airship was pronounced ready for her "shakedown" flight.

DEMOCRATS CONFIDENT OF SPEEDY PASSAGE

Hope to Send Measure Back to House by Saturday Night

1—Democratic leaders promise speedy enactment of the emergency "money bill' in Congress with a vote by Saturday night in the Senate sending it to the House for acceptance of Senate amendments and the currency "rider."

2—Republican senators led by Reed of Pennsylvania plan to fight the measure which is in reality an amendment to the farm relief bill but they expect to fail because of the overwhelming Democratic majority.

3—The American dollar showed a gain at the opening of the London exchange today, then receded slightly. The market showed little of the gyrations so common by Saturday excitement of yesterday and the London press was far more optimistic, expressing belief that President Roosevelt's "suspension" of the gold standard would prove a blessing and cure for world ills.

Washington, April 21 (INS)—Prompt congressional aproval of the emergency "money bill," empowering President Roosevelt to invoke inflation as a weapon in the war of international currencies, was predicted today by administration leaders.

The bill, offered in the Senate as an amendment to the pending farm relief measure, was taken up by the Senate banking and currency committee at a secret session. A favorable report was anticipated by noon.

Administration leaders hoped to enact the farm bill, with the currency "rider" by Saturday night. The measure then must go back to the House for acceptance of Senate amendments and the currency "rider."

A group of Republican Senate conservatives planned to fight the bill. They agreed with assertions by Senator Reed (R) of Pennsylvania, that the measure was "unsound" and would cause suffering among wage-earners and people with bank savings. They expected the bill to pass, however, in view of the overwhelming and loyal Democratic majorities in House and Senate.

Advocates of the inflationary program predicted its adoption by Congress would turn the economic tide toward the restoration of pros-

DEMOCRATS TO SPEED PASSAGE OF INFLATION BILL

REPUBLICAN OPPONENTS SEE OWN FIGHT AS HOPELESS

party. They called it the most important economic measure sent Congress in a half century.

STRIPS WALL ST. OF POWER

Its advocates declared it would:

1—Give the President control of American currency, while stripping Wall Street and the Federal Reserve System of the long-used power to expand or deflate the currency.

2—Stabilize farm prices at a living level while barring extortionate values.

3—Force Europe to enter agreements for stabilization of foreign exchanges.

4—Slash the cost of war debt payments by European debtors, if they agreed to further disarmament.

5—Effectively terminate the raids on American markets by foreign nations producing commodities under depreciated currencies.

6—Open to American commerce the world markets long closed by depreciated currencies thereof.

3 BILLION NEW MONEY

The bill actually would authorize the President to issue $3,500,000,000 in United States notes for the payment of maturing federal obligations for the purchase of United States obligations; reduce the gold content of the American dollar by not to exceed 50 per cent; and accept $100,000,000 in silver as payments on the war debts at "not more than 50 cents an ounce."

The President would attain absolute control of American currency through a provision calling for agreements by the Federal Reserve Board and its member banks to purchase or sell $3,000,000,000 of government securities any time the treasury requested. If the banks agreed, the President would have the power to put either bonds or currency in circulation up to $3,000,000,000 at any time.

GREENBACKS ALTERNATIVE

An alternative proposal would give the President power to issue $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks for the same purpose. If the banks refused to carry out this function according to his wishes, then the Treasury would do so, using the greenbacks to retire government bonds.

When too much money was in circulation, the President merely would retire the greenbacks or issue new bonds to meet current obligations.

This power to expand or contract the currency in circulation would give the President control over commodity prices. His economic advisers declared he virtually would be able to fix commodity prices at any level he desired and then to stabilize them at that level. If prices sky-rocketed, as the cost of living increased violently, he would have the power to order a deflation of the currency to restore a lower level.

The bill would give Mr. Roosevelt a tremendous weapon to use in the forthcoming economic conferences.

SLASHING WAR DEBTS

With Premier MacDonald of Great Britain, landing in New York today, for instance, the bill would enable Mr. Roosevelt to negotiate an Anglo-American agreement for stabilizing the exchange rate between the American dollar and British pound. It would apply as well to other currencies and to agreements for stabilizing the ratio between gold and silver throughout the world.

The weapon would be authority to accept silver payments on war debts, up to a total of $100,000,000 at "not to exceed 50 cents an ounce for silver," and to reduce the gold content of the American dollar.

The British government, for instance, would be far more able to meet its war debt payments, if part were paid in silver and the rest in a depreciated gold dollar. The debt would be slashed to the extent that silver were accepted and the gold dollar reduced.

There is a specific clause relating to international agreements for establishing a "ratio between gold and silver." The President would have authority to fix the value of the gold dollar at whatever ratio might be adopted. This, in itself, would terminate the raids on American commerce and reopen lost world markets to American goods.

Pres. Roosevelt Called Saboteur

Refuses to Comment on Gold Situation at Washington

New York, April 21 (INS)—En route to Washington for his momentous conference with President Roosevelt, J. Refusing to comment on the abandonment of the gold standard he left immediately for Washington.

He was met at quarantine by the city's official welcoming boat, the Macom, and taken at once to Jersey City, where he and his party boarded a special train to speed to Washington.

He admitted abandonment of the gold standard by the United States would bear materially on his conferences with the President, but declined to make any definite comment on the turn of events. He declined also to comment on the charge of Speaker Henry T. Rainey that "nations tied up with the British pound" were attempting to attack the United States monetary position.

HERRIOT PARTY FEARS FAILURE IN U. S. VISIT

Roosevelt Looked Upon as Isolating France by Gold Action

S. S. Ile de France, en route to New York, April 21 (AP)—Members of former Premier Edouard Herriot's party feared today they faced failure in the Roosevelt conversations in Washington as a result of America's departure from the gold standard.

The French delegation resented the sudden action as throwing France, still on a gold standard, into monetary isolation and doubted whether they could make any satisfactory trade arrangements with the United States now. One of them exclaimed:

"We might as well turn around and go back home."

Others said they felt France had been placed in an extremely difficult position without warning.

Complete instructions from the Paris government were to be transmitted by telephone to the delegation, only two days remained for the group to readjust its course of action before it reaches New York.

Herriot, who was obviously cast into gloom yesterday by the news, was more cheerful today with the prospect that at least a little time remained to work out a new program.

Members of his party believed President Roosevelt's decision was the result of pressure by farmers desiring to widen their foreign markets. Others believed it meant the British had been making too stringent terms for a return to the gold standard.

Americans in Paris Fear French Surtax

Paris, April 21 (AP)—Bank of France officials said today that the French franc is not in any danger and that there is no necessity for any protective monetary measures.

This followed an emphatic denial from the French finance Ministry that this country plans to abandon the gold standard as a result of similar action by the United States.

Norman H. Davis, special American ambassador in Europe now to see Premier Deladier today and meanwhile Georges Bonnet, finance minister, was returning to his office to take charge of the situation. He has been on vacation.

American business men here feared the French government, rather than depart from the gold basis, would seek to compensate for the dollar's decline by applying an exchange surtax. This action was taken by France against British and Japanese imports when those exchanges dropped.

British Cheer Up; Quit Talk of Money War

London, April 21 (AP) — Great Britain began to see brighter side to the world monetary situation today.

A belief that President Roosevelt sought to bring pressure on Prime Minister MacDonald was dispersed today in informed quarters.

The Daily Telegraph said it was unlikely that President Roosevelt was launching a monetary war to gain a bargaining position in the world economic conference.

The Daily Mail declared the President "was attempting a world cure for a world problem." It visualized a return to a new gold standard by all nations at a much lower level than present.

The Herald said the "President's move is a wise one," and "the need for inflation is urgent, but it must be a world inflation."

The Times said: "The divorce of the dollar from the gold standard may yet prove a blessing."

The sports last night were confined strictly to beer drinking and a pretzel throwing contest which was not on the original schedule.

Dollar Gains in London Then Drops Slightly

London, April 21 (AP) — The American dollar opened at $3.83 to the pound this morning. It had closed last night at $3.85½.

After the opening today the rate weakened slightly to $3.86.

Much quieter conditions prevailed than yesterday, when general selling was accompanied by violent movements as the result of the abandonment of the gold standard in America and the inflation move there.

The French franc, to which the British Government's exchange equalization fund was giving support yesterday, opened at 87 francs, 87 centimes to the pound and later dropped to a marking of 88.18.

It is understood in the market that the exchange equalization fund recently converted the bulk of its dollars into gold and is now concentrating on assisting the gold franc.

BACK-TO-FARM MOVE GROWS

Washington, April 21 (AP) — In New England, as elsewhere in the country, the "back-to-the-farm" movement continued in 1932, with 588,000 persons on New England farms on January 1, 1933, as compared with 571,000 on the same day in 1932.

Department of Agriculture statistics made public today show that while 21,000 persons left New England farms in 1932, no fewer than 38,000 left other pursuits to return to agriculture—a net gain of 17,000 for the farms.

The farmward movement throughout the nation brought a farm population for the country of 32,242,000 on January 1, 1933, as compared with 31,241,000 on January 1, 1932.

Bulls and Goats Placed; Rams Put Off Island

Washington, April 21 (AP)—When does a ram's head become a bull's neck? Answer: When the United States Geographic Board says so.

The board has decided that Bull's Neck is the approved name of the little island in the Elizabeth Islands group in the town of Gosnold, Duke's County, Mass. The name Ram's Head had been given the island on maps as early as 1836.

Some of the other decisions of the geographic board with regard to New England names, include:

Cedar Island instead of East Buck for another of the Elizabeth islands in Buzzards Bay; Goats Neck instead of Bulls Neck; for still another of the same group of islands, and Veckatimest instead of East Buck for a fourth island in that group.

Hannah Clarkin Pond for the body of water in Charlestown, R. I., known variously as Hannah Clerk, Hannah Clarke and Hannah Clarkson.

Monomoy for the small bay, formerly a pond, on the south side of Nonamessett Island, south of Buzzards Bay.

HAVERHILL MAYOR STARTS MOVE FOR MEDAL FOR BOY HERO

HUNDREDS SEE YOUTH PERFORM RESCUE

'Bravest Act of Any Haverhill Man,' Says Mayor Dalrymple

Haverhill, April 21—Moves for city honors and a Carnegie medal were started today by Mayor George E. Dalrymple as rewards for Raymond Butler, 17-year-old hero in the rescue of Mrs. Marion Smith, 21, Atkinson, N. H., bride.

Mrs. Smith was being swept to death in the rushing torrent of the Merrimac river when Butler leaped from Haverhill bridge, caught a rope that was thrown by firemen and hauled the unconscious Mrs. Smith to safety.

LOSES GIRL'S PIN

Butler was more dazed today over the congratulations he received than over the thrilling rescue he turned in. His chief concern, he said, was the loss of his girl's graduation pin that was attached to a sweater he discarded during the rescue.

"No Haverhill man has ever done a braver act," says Mayor Dalrymple's comment in announcing reward plans.

Young Butler thanked the mayor, but said he would rather be relieved of "all that fuss."

He said he saw Mrs. Smith in the river shortly after she tumbled from among hundreds who had been watching the flood waters along the river bank.

THIRD RESCUE

A neat dive from the bridge brought him close to Mrs. Smith and he soon was near enough to grasp her. At the same time he shouted to those on shore for a rope and deftly caught the one that was shot to him by Capt. Arthur Walker of the Water st. fire station. Firemen hauled Butler and the rescued bride to shore in short order.

Young Butler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Butler but makes his home with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Butler of Leonard ave., Bradford.

Two years ago he saved a girl from Hunkydori Pond in Georgetown and five years ago hauled a companion to safety near the spot of his latest rescue.

The former Irene Castle, now the wife of Major Frederic McLaughlin, Chicago sportsman, was unable to resist the call of the stage, at least when profits of the production go to the benefit of orphans and animals. FLOOD LOSS IS THOUSANDS AS DANGER ENDS

Score of Cities Face Task of Repairing Damage

New England's flood area definitely passed the danger stage today but work of damage repair faced scores of cities and towns.

The spell of dry, cool weather accounted for a cessation of the swollen rivers and water that forced the use of boats in streets and highways receded.

Sections along the lower Connecticut and Merrimack rivers were still affected today but the peak has passed and waterlines were recorded much lower than earlier in the week.

State highways were considerably damaged by the overflow that inundated many of them, especially in the New Hampshire and western Massachusetts sections.

Mills and factories, situated at the very banks of the rivers went about the work of drying out so that boilers might start and employes be called back.

The first sign of definite letup came at noon yesterday and was general in all the river sections. Fears were maintained for a while that melting ice and snow in the northerly regions might add a new menace were dispelled when the cool weather served to keep the thaw gradual.

No estimates of the total damage in Lawrence, Lowell, Concord, N. H., Northampton, Holyoke and other points were available today but such damage is expected to reach many thousands of dollars.

SAIL ON TO AID FISHERMEN

ON TO THE POTOMAC

The famed American fishing schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud is today passing along the Atlantic coast sailing to the mouth of the Potomac. Then up the Potomac to Washington—on its mission to aid the fishing industry of New England — yes — the American fishermen.

Bay Stater's Death Puzzles Doctors

Phoenix, Ariz., April 21 (AP)—Unconscious for 20 days, Arthur M. Jones, 28, a broker, died of what medical men said was a rare brain condition.

Taking an anaesthetic for extraction of two teeth, Jones lapsed into a sleep from which he never awakened.

Physicians explained that in extremely rare instances, the texture of brain cells governing consciousness are so delicate that even a mild anaesthetic weakens and sometimes destroys them.

Jones, who was head of a Phoenix stock brokerage firm, came here from Greenfield, Mass. He was a native of Fall River, Mass.

BOSQUET PLAYS AT PUZZLE IN DEATH HOUSE

Mother in Tears in Plea for Life of Killer Son

Roland Bosquet, Attleboro "crybaby killer," calmly sought the solution of a jig saw puzzle today in his cell in the death house at Charlestown state prison while awaiting the word from Gov. Ely which will mean life or death for him.

The "cry-baby killer" faces only nine more days of life unless Gov. Ely commutes his death sentence to life imprisonment for the murder of Patrolman Edward E. Gobin of Attleboro in January, 1932.

MOTHER'S LAST PLEA

Gov. Ely heard the young slayer classified as feeble minded and irresponsible by the boy's parents, sister, neighbors and attorneys at a hearing yesterday at the State House.

Sobbing hysterically, Mrs. Ethege Bosquet, the slayer's mother, was the last to appeal to the governor for clemency.

"I appeal for clemency for my son," Mrs. Bosquet sobbed. "I don't think he was responsible," she said.

Ethege Bosquet, the youth's father, and his sister, Mrs. Estelle Bosquet, pleaded for clemency.

Mrs. Mary Pickett, a neighbor, told the governor that Roland was feebleminded.

WIDOW UNDECIDED

Mrs. Eva Mansfield, another neighbor, told Gov. Ely she had known Bosquet for 10 years and always thought he was a model son to his parents but he impressed her as having the mentality of a 12-year-old child.

Atty. James H. Leedham, counsel for Bosquet, in outlining the case to Gov. Ely, declared his client thought he was being taken for a ride because the car was not going in the direction of the police station."

He said 2250 residents of Norton and Attleboro had signed a petition for executive clemency for Bosquet. Judge Frederick W. Fosdick, who presided at the trial, was also in favor of leniency, Leedham said.

JUDD CASE TO JURY TODAY

Florence, Ariz., April 21 (AP)—The State of Arizona climaxed its contest of Winnie Ruth Judd's effort to escape the gallows in the penitentiary of the asylum with testimony of psychiatrists who declared her not insane in the legal sense.

Dr. Paul Bowers of Los Angeles declared the blonde young woman, who is under sentence to be hanged for the murder of Agnes Anne Leroi, is neurotic, depressed, "scared to death almost," but is "malingering—feigning the aspects of insanity."

Dr. Joseph Catton of San Francisco testified she is suffering from "neurosis of the condemned," consisting in part of "consciously simulated symptoms" and in part of "mechanics beyond the control of Mrs. Judd" which "relatively promptly would be ameliorated" should the death penalty be commuted.

While the state and defense each had a few remaining law witnesses when the court session closed, it was indicated testimony yet to come would be brief and that the lunacy jury might be given the case late today.

Poison Widow to Fight Any Decision Hinting Insanity

The long-awaited report of two state alienists on the mental condition of Mrs. Jessie R. Costello, accused murderess, was expected today.

In anticipation that the two doctors, Clarence V. Bonner and L. Vernon Briggs, intend to declare the widow insane, counsel for Mrs. Costello declared that he would seek intervention of Gov. Ely on such a verdict.

"It was obvious at the outset of their examinations that she is sane," said Atty. Francis E. Raffer, chief counsel.

"If the alienists report that Mrs. Costello is insane I will call upon the governor at once. The mental tests of my client have been altogether too long."

Atty. Raffer has repeatedly stated that Mrs. Costello wants to go on trial in June, in order to convince a jury that she is innocent in the cyanide death of her husband, Fire Capt. William J. Costello of Peabody.

CHASE ENDS IN CEMETERY

Springfield, April 21 After a five-mile chase through the Oak Grove Cemetery, during which 12 shots were fired, Richard Barrett, 22, of Worcester, was captured early today by motorcycle police.

In Springfield District Court today Barrett will be charged with being drunk, operating a machine while under the influence of liquor, driving at an excessive rate of speed and operating in a reckless manner.

DIVIDEND PLEA BY DEPOSITORS

On petition of six depositors in Supreme Court, a dividend from the closed Exchange Trust Co., was asked today of either Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy of Essex S. Abbott, liquidating agent. Hearing on the petition was set for May 5.

The petitioners, Catherine S. Sullivan, Esther B. Jacobs, Mary Brennan, Clare F. Brennan, Oscar Tilley and Julia D. Brennan, charged that millions of dollars have been collected in the past few months in the liquidation process.

They also pointed out that no report of receipts and expenditures has been filed with the court in spite of the fact that the court set December 31 as the last day for filing claims.

Wheat Removed From Stranded Ship

Cardinal, Ont., April 21 (AP)—Two salvage tugs and a lightering barge were working alongside the grounded steamer Charles R. Huntley, early today, removing its cargo of 90,000 bushels of wheat.

The vessel went aground on a shoal at the entrance of the north channel, four miles west of here.

ARREST PAIR IN PRICE WAR

Two alleged racketeers will be arraigned in East Cambridge Court today in connection with the destruction of $8000 worth of garments in a Cambridge cleansing plant.

Police say the arrest uncovers a price war in the cleansing industry. The two men were turned over to Cambridge police by Boston officials yesterday. They gave their names as Michael Catino, 31, of Commonwealth ave., Allston, and Michael Paino, 27, of Marion st., East Boston.

At Cambridge headquarters the pair were identified by an employe of the cleansing company as the two men who had threatened him with a gun when he found them in the plant last Saturday night. Several racks of clothing had been destroyed.

Poisoning Fatal

HONEYMOONING IN WEST

Dam Breaks; Small Buildings Damaged

Southbridge, April 21 (AP)—A dam at Breakneck Pond gave way, flooding nearby fields with five and six feet of water. Several sheds and other small buildings were washed away. Cellars of homes in the section were flooded. The pond is about five miles from the center of the town.

FISHERMEN OFF FOR CAPITAL

The famous Gloucester fishing schooner, Gertrude L. Thebaud, carrying her embassy of fishermen to Washington to present their case to the President and Congress, was on the high seas today, headed for Cape May, N. J., her next port of call.

The schooner, which left Gloucester shortly before midnight Wednesday, stopped at New Bedford early yesterday. Fishing skippers from southern New England boarded the Thebaud there to join the delegation. They brought with them statistics concerning the fishing industry in southern New England waters.

Donald Boudreau and his dog who were discovered as stowaways and put ashore at New Bedford before the Thebaud resumed her journey, were back home in Gloucester trying to recover from their disappointment at failing to make the trip.

CURLEY SCOFFS AT FIN. COM.

The report of the Boston finance commission, with Chairman Frank Goodwin dissenting, which was submitted to the legislative committee on municipal finance, was ridiculed today by both Chairman Goodwin and Mayor Curley.

"The silliest report I ever heard of," was the gist of Chairman Goodwin's remarks on the 40-page list of recommendations of his fellow members of the commission. Mayor Curley briefly characterized the report as "valueless."

The commission's report, as revealed in the Boston Evening American yesterday, calls for an immediate 10 per cent cut in the permanent personnel of the city, which would deprive 1200 workers of jobs.

The mayor's office was subjected to attack in the report, and reductions in salaries of his office force and a smaller number of secretaries are recommended. The City Council, the hospital, institutions and street laying out departments are also the subject of sweeping economy recommendations.

Traffic Commissioner Conry's office also comes in for lengthy comment. At least $50,000 could be saved by elimination of unnecessary employes in this department, according to the report.

'Stunt Man' Slain in Talkie Scene

Los Angeles, April 21 (AP)—A coroner's jury has been summoned to hear the story today of how Hurd McClellan, 48-year-old "stunt man" was fatally shot while motion picture cameras registered the scene in a Hollywood studio last Monday.

McClellan died from a bullet which, fired by Marion Semmelmeyer, expert pistol shot, penetrated two "bullet proof" jackets.

Murchie Elected

Portland, Me., April 21 (AP)—H. H. Murchie of Calais was elected a member of the board of directors of the Maine Central railroad at the annual meeting of the stockholders.

"Red" Curran in Hiding as Police Fear for His Life

Surrender of Stephen Wallace, Gustin gang leader, was freely predicted by police today at the same time they expressed fear for the life of Thomas "Red" Curran whose testimony has already sent two in prison for assault upon Special Officer Daniel J. McDonald last January.

Because of legal obstacles, police were powerless to stop release of Curran on bail from Plymouth jail, where he was held as a material witness.

Curran said that he was tired of jail life and was willing to take a chance on gang vengeance which police feel is imminent because of Curran's testimony that sent Frank Dumbrowski and William "Fagot" Dineen to prison.

The "star witness" was bailed by George E. Murphy of Shapleigh ave., Medford. Several previous attempts to bail Curran were made by mysterious groups, who first called the jail by telephone and then were scared away.

In their dire predictions that Curran would soon be found dead, police pointed out that his bailer would not lose by it.

"The law says a bailer has only to produce the body," they said.

Inquiry at the Medford home of Curran and at the South Boston haunts of the Gustin gang revealed no trace of him.

"I guess we can look for Wallace to surrender as soon as Curran is out of the way. He would not dare surrender and face Curran in court," Sergt Crowley commented.

FREED BRITONS LEAVE RUSSIA

Moscow, April 21 (AP)—Three British electrical engineers who were sentenced to expulsion by a Soviet court that tried them on charges of sabotage, briery and espionage, are on their way home today.

The trio, Allan Monkhouse, John Cushny and C. H. Nordwall, were accompanied by their co-worker, A. W. Gregory, who was acquitted of the charges; Nordwall's Russian wife, and Robert Turner, their English counsel, when they left Moscow last night.

A squad of Red army soldiers was stationed about the railroad platform, but aside from this there was no display of authority anywhere at the leave-taking.

The Britons reiterated their refusal to make any comment on their work, the charges, or their deportation.

SEC. PERKINS IN PLEA FOR LABOR

Washington, April 21 (AP)—Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, told the Daughters of the American Revolution here that the safety of American business institutions depends on the prosperity of American labor.

Secretary Perkins called on the organization to assist in bringing about national unity. She said that 50 years ago the very mechanics of home-making would have prevented women gathering for such conventions as the one she addressed.

"Machinery in the home, produced as a result of the development of electricity, she said, now makes it possible for women to have the time to take an active interest in national affairs.

"We must so organize the industrial machine of the country," she said, "as to provide steady work for all. If the wage earners have work bringing in money they spend it for food, clothing and other things. Out of this purchasing grows prosperous times, and when there is no work we have hard times."

King Midas Is Off Throne

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

King Midas joins the list of happy abdications.

His gold standard was knocked colder than an army meal.

Result was like dropping a seidlitz powder into a slumbering industrial volcano.

The prodigal sum came back to Wall Street. The brokers killed the fatted bull.

They've started that Australian pursuit race again. The ticker ran behind the market, the market couldn't catch the brokers and the customers were chasing everything and everybody.

CARRIES ALL-BRAN ON EVERY VOYAGE

Seaman Finds This Delicious Cereal Relieves Constipation

Here is an unsolicited letter from Mr. Darragh:

"I have been going to sea for the past fourteen years. Every trip, I underwent severe headaches, nervousness, and sleeplessness. Tried all sorts of remedies, and received only temporary relief.

"So hearing about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN thought I would get a box, which I did. That was six months ago, haven't been without it at home, and when I go to sea a box of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is always with me."—George D. Darragh, 1914 32nd Avenue, Oakland, California.

Tests show ALL-BRAN contains two things for common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

How much pleasanter this is than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily will correct most types of constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

METHODISTS TO WAR ON BETTING

Plymouth, N. H., April 21 (AP)—Rev. Leroy W. Stringfellow, superintendent of the Southern district of the Methodist Episcopal Church in New Hampshire, declared here: "Methodism has never been defeated in the struggle against political corruption. The fight against gambling is not yet over; the fight against liquor just begun."

The Haverhill, Mass., clergyman, made the statement while delivering his report at a session of the New Hampshire conference of the church.

He deplored the action of New Hampshire lawmakers in legalizing pari-mutuel betting at race tracks in the state and spoke of "the imminent destruction of the bars to intoxicating liquor."

In his report, Mr. Stringfellow asked for support for religious publications as a defense against the "unscrupulous and profit-seeking secular press."

NEWSBOYS SCREEN TREAT

A treat is in store for more than 100 Boston American carrier boys tomorrow morning when they journey to Loew's Orpheum Theater to see the picture, "Oliver Twist" and a big vaudeville show as the guests of Manager Victor J. Morris.

The leading role of Oliver Twist is taken by the sensational little Our Gang comedy star, Dickie Moore, and his exploits will serve to give the newsies more than the usual number of thrills.

NEW PET JOINS WHITE HOUSE

Washington, April 21 (AP)—An addition to the White House kennels was Tiny Tre, pedigreed English sheep dog presented to President and Mrs. Roosevelt by Mrs. Louis Roesler of Great Barrington, Mass.

The prospect that Tiny Tre will remain long at the White House, however, is slim because Mrs. Roosevelt laughingly said she was afraid Major, the White House dog, might take a strong dislike to the new acquisition.

Tiny Tre will be on exhibition at a Washington dog show for the next couple of days and probably will be sent then to the Roosevelt farm near Warm Springs, Ga.

The bishop voiced his opinion of the beer delivery to the White House in a speech at a State-wide Prohibition rally here.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Cabooches and Kinks!

(In the Serene Manner).

This is one of those days when I'd like to work myself up into a sizzling froth of indignation at something or other, but I find an increasing amiability warming my aged veins and a tolerance that is absolutely unforgivable in a Broadway paragrapher. I pick up a morning paper and discover that a young gentleman with an over-developed narcissus complex drives shafts of vaguely phrased petulance in my direction and I search myself carefully to find traces of the barb-wounds and discover that I am unscathed. I should rise in righteous anger, gird my marrow loins and go forth to battle, head high and heart staunch but instead a blissful lethargy imprisons me and I find myself shamefully serene.

A telephone call informs me that one of my movie shorts has suddenly been thrust in as a compromise piece with the Chevalier picture at the Rivoli and casually I scan the dramatic pages in the fond expectation that the Sobol name will blaze forth—perhaps a caricature of those things they call "stills." Not a single mention in either advertisement or advance publicity. This, I feel, calls for indignation—the value of the Sobol name as a box office draw is impugned.

My attention is called to a series of bigoted statements made by a school teacher in one of the local institutions before a class of young children in which the Jews are denounced and the Hitler pogroms condoned. This calls for a protest—but I subside when I receive a letter of lengthy explanation in which I am informed that the eminent instructor's remarks have been misinterpreted. The communication, coming from the teacher's superior, is tantamount to an apology and my anger subsides. It's a shame—for outside a cold rain is bombarding the windows and there has never been a more suitable day for spurts of indignation. Mr. E.—I am informed—is "a "mature man who has taught in two other college preparatory schools and in college. He has written an English History which has been accepted for publication by a large publishing house and he is under contract by another publishing firm, one of the oldest and best known, to write a World History, which is partially completed." I am informed further that he had informed his students "that under present conditions it was difficult for anyone outside of Germany to get any true or accurate picture of the conditions in Germany, and that he, himself, really did not know anything about so-called atrocities against the Jews, and that most people, perhaps, were in the same situation." And so on. Which leaves me with the conviction that Mr. E. devotes himself too intently to history of the past instead of history of the present as truthfully revealed in the newspapers—but there you are—any other day, I would have devoted a column saturated with phrases of indignation. Today I dismiss the subject and Mr. E.—mildly and tolerantly.

I learn, as long as we are on the subject, that several of our eminent songwriters, headed by Mr. Irving Berlin, are awaiting the forthcoming ban against popular songs written by Jewish composers. When that happens, Mr. Berlin plans to institute suit against the Hitler regime because Mr. Berlin's songs are extremely popular in Germany. Not that he expects any material results from the suit—merely that it will focus attention on the Nazi pogroming activities against the American songwriters of Jewish faith. Now that calls for indignation—and Mr. Berlin is prepared to be indignant. Ordinarily, I should join him and pile my indignation right on top of his—but, there you are. I can't drive this serenity from my heart—this magnificent feeling of tolerance.

Clarence Darrow, 76, murmers: "Congratulate me on not having to stay in this fool world much longer." I should resent that—coming from Mr. Darrow, particularly, for if anybody has helped to make this less a fool world than it is, I name you, the eminent lawyer. I like this fool world for all its bigotry, intolerance, misunderstandings, oppressions and terrors. I don't believe Mr. Darrow honestly wants to leave it any more than that other gentleman, far older than Mr. Darrow wants to leave it—Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Sr., I mean. If Mr. Darrow wanted to give up, he wouldn't be taking such excellent care of himself as he is. I could really work up some indignation over Mr. Darrow and his statement—but already, you see, even as this line is piling out of this typewriter, I no longer care. Why should I get indignant over a statement by Mr. Darrow. I've never even met the fellow!

HOUGHTON HEAD SAYS SHIFT TO AID BUSINESS

Taking the country off the gold standard is the greatest thing that has happened for business and the public in many years. This is the opinion of A. W. Ackermann, president and general manager of Houghton & Dutton.

The new currency law will have no immediate effect on Houghton & Dutton prices, Mr. Ackermann revealed.

BUYING TO INCREASE

"We have already been notified by our manufacturers of advances in prices. Fortunately our stocks are at their highest in many years as we have been buying heavily in the past few months because our biggest period of trade next to Christmas is just ahead," Mr. Ackermann said.

"We promise that we shall not advance prices until we have to pay more for our merchandise, and we think that this will be the general policy of all Boston department stores," Mr. Ackermann continued.

An increase in buying may be looked for in the next few days, Mr. Ackermann revealed, in which he is in accord with the opinion of A. Lincoln Filene, another Boston merchant.

"Inflation will immediately prompt people to fill their needs in clothing, and furniture for the home at present prices, which are the lowest in my memory," Mr. Ackermann added. "This, in itself, should mean a tremendous increase in business right away."

RECORD SALES DAY

Yesterday was one of the biggest days Houghton and Dutton have experienced in the past year, Mr. Ackermann revealed.

"Within a month or so, prices in retail stores will gradually advance," said Mr. Ackermann. "After a time, this increase in price will mean a larger volume of dollars and cents business, which will permit stores to employ more people and to pay higher salaries."

"President Roosevelt, in this latest manifestation of the new deal, has again shown the brand of courage and clear thinking that will lead us out of the depression."

Gift Compacts on Free List

Although the city of Malden is the possessor of three fancy compacts, said to have cost in the neighborhood of seven or eight dollars each, which Malden's three councilwomen, Judge Emma Hall Schofield, Miss Ollie L. Brown and Mrs. Esther Jordan, refused to accept as "souvenirs" of their office, because they believed the money could be spent to better advantage for welfare or other purposes, City Comptroller Clarence W. Clark has not received any bills for them.

The bills for the wallets, costing an equal amount, which were accepted by all but one of the male members of the City Council, have been received.

'HIDDEN CLUES' KEY IN JUDD MURDERS

Important points in the Ruth Judd case remain uncleared as the State of Arizona holds its final debate on whether she is to hang next Friday. A staff member of the Hearst Newspapers, Lionel C. Moise, now of the Milwaukee Wisconsin News, who covered the famous murder, believes these points would help establish that she is insane. He discusses them in this article of a series.

By LIONEL C. MOISE

A six-room cottage slumbers in the October sunshine that pours down on Phoenix, the state capital of Arizona.

The blinds are drawn. Behind these blinds are mystery and tragedy.

They are raised a little and we find that two women have been murdered inside.

That is the real trouble with the Ruth Judd case. That is why it is difficult to say what really went on in the Phoenix "party bungalow" the night that Agnes Ann Lerol and Hedvid (Sammy) Samuelson were shot to death.

MUCH UNANSWERED

There are many questions in the Judd case that remain unanswered today, even while the State of Arizona prepares to hang a woman whose whole history, whose whole crime and whose whole subsequent conduct indicates mental irresponsibility, if not actual and definite insanity.

In an effort to answer them, I sent a half dozen men to Phoenix immediately after the murders. These men—and among them were some of the ablest reporters on the Pacific Coast—found investigation blocked at every turn by the attitude of the Maricopa county authorities.

Diaries and letters of the two victims were suppressed, or turned over to private individuals.

Fingerprint records were never made from bloodstains inside the house—though the prints were evident.

MYSTERY IN ATTRESS

Mrs. Judd had no car; yet a blood-stained mattress from the bungalow was found two miles away. How it got there remains a mystery.

These perhaps could all have been explained in reason had there been a real investigation at the start, but the attitude of authorities was expressed in the statement of County Attorney Lloyd J. Andrews:

"She killed the women and admits it. That's enough for the law."

Let us consider that house with the drawn blinds, as it stands on the outskirts of Phoenix.

Lights stream from the curtained windows. From within come shouts, laughter, song—the voice of Ann, Sammy and Winnie Judd.

In all these women burns the fitful fever of tuberculosis—the common ailment that has driven them to this land of majestic solitudes. Sammy, the youngest, keeps a diary, calling herself a hedonist, declaring she "lives for the hour."

She is not interested in men, "except as companions." It is Ann who absorbs her.

Ann, on the other hand, "loves everybody." She lavishes the devotion of a nurse on Sammy, but she likes men, too.

She writes long and affectionate letters to her husband, but she also enjoys attentions from other men —one of them "Happy Jack" Halloran. She is fond of Ann, but not so fond of Hedvig Samuelson—"Sammy." She finds Sammy "too masculine" and "too jealous of Ann."

Unless we credit Ruth Judd's story of self-defense, the story fails entirely to supply anything like a reasonable or sane motive for the double shooting.

The concluding article of this series will appear tomorrow.

THOUSANDS TO QUIT U. S. JOBS

Washington, April 21 (AP)—Retirement, under the Civil Service Retirement Act, of all federal employes who shall have completed 30 years' service on or before July 1 was recommended today by Director of the Budget Douglas, in his letter to Congress, accompanying the independent offices bill.

The proposal, which would affect thousands of veteran government workers, would retire automatically employes in the Civil Service under the retirement act on the prescribed annuities to which they are entitled. The President, however, would have the power to exempt by executive order any person from the compulsory retirement.

Ellis' truck crashed into a parked truck in charge of Arthur Pelletier of Brooks st., Pawtucket, R. I., on the outskirts of North Attleboro. Police said Ellis, who is 17, had altered his license to make it appear he is 18.

Malden Boy Missing Month Is Sought

No trace has been found of Wallace H. Fuller, Malden high pupil, 16 years of age, who was informed by school authorities that he would have to apologize before he could resume his classes, for an infraction of the school rules. The boy left the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Fuller, bound for school a month ago but did not go to the school.

DAILY TRUE STORY -:- Lawyer's Strategy

FOR THREE DAYS Bob Morgan has been trying to think of some way in which to beat a scoundrel at his own game and save Marjorie Fenton's home for her.

When, following the death of her father, Marjorie had told her story to him he had hardly been able to believe it. But investigation had shown him it was true, while all his reading of the law had failed to show him a way out.

Then suddenly he had it.

As he waited in his law office for Marjorie to arrive in response to a telephone call, he reviewed what she had told him. How her father, dying, had told her that their home had been heavily mortgaged to Alonzo Pickens.

Several years before, Pickens had learned that Marjorie's father, desperate for immediate money, had technically violated the law in a business deal, and had begun to blackmail him under threat of exposure. To insure that Mr. Fenton would pay the blackmail, Pickens had forced him to give a mortgage on his home, and was now threatening Marjorie with foreclosure, the home having been left to Marjorie in her father's will.

REVIEWS PLANS

"Now listen carefully, dear," said Bob, when Marjorie arrived at his office. "I've learned that Pickens has never filed that mortgage. But if he wanted to foreclose, that wouldn't make any difference. The point is that no one knows he has it except you and me. Do you know how much your father paid him for the supposed interest?"

Marjorie calculated for a moment and fixed the sum at four thousand dollars.

"All right," said Bob. "Now what I'm going to tell you to do is something that I would never do to a man other than Pickens. But he has gone outside the law to blackmail your father, and if we can pull a fast one on him he has it coming to him. I don't feel the least compunction about it. And you needn't, either. You've been wronged and, as a lawyer, I'm advising you how to right that wrong and still not violate the law."

"What do you want me to do?" asked Marjorie.

"So far as Pickens knows, your father never told you how he was forced to give that mortgage," Bob answered. "Well, you go to Pickens and tell him that you can't pay the mortgage now, but that if he will lend you $4000 to make repairs on the house you will give him a new mortgage. As an inducement offer to pay him a higher rate of interest. When you make out the new mortgage and sign it make him give you the old mortgage.

"Pickens will probably go it because he doesn't stand to lose anything. He'll still have a mortgage on the house for the old sum plus four thousand, and it's worth far more than that. And he'll figure he can foreclose at any time if you don't pay the higher interest. So he'll fall for it unless—" Bob stopped.

RECEIVES MORTGAGE

"Unless what?" asked Marjorie.

"Never mind," said Bob. "I'm banking on Pickens not hiring a lawyer to help him because he'd rather keep the thing quiet and, then, he won't want to pay a lawyer for a thing he thinks he can do himself."

"But I don't see how that will help me any," said Marjorie.

"He'll still have the mortgage and I'll merely owe him four thousand dollars more."

"Never mind that," Bob repeated. "You leave that to me. As soon as you sign the new mortgage bring me the old one."

Two days later Marjorie returned and handed Bob the old mortgage. As he tore it into fragments he asked, "Did Pickens have a lawyer to help him prepare the new one?"

"No," said Marjorie. "And I only wanted to pay him eight per cent interest instead of six but he insisted on ten. So I let him put it in. Was that all right?"

"Couldn't be better," said Bob, smiling. "Now you've got your home back and the four thousand Perkins blackmailed out of your father."

SAVING THE HOME

Marjorie looked her wonderment. Again Bob smiled.

"You don't believe me, do you," he said. "Well, I know the law, something that Pickens didn't know. That mortgage you gave him isn't worth the paper it's written on. That's the law in this state and the courts have time and again said it's the law."

"Why isn't it any good?" asked Marjorie.

"Because 10 per cent interest is usury," Bob replied. "The state constitution fixes six per cent as the legal rate of interest and if a man charges more he not only can't collect the interest but he loses the principal as well. He just can't come into court, that's all. And some day Pickens will pay a lawyer to tell him the same thing."

Quincy City Council Passes Resolve for President's Day

The Quincy City Council has unanimously endorsed the plan of the Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers to observe Sunday, April 30, as "President's Day."

This unanimous endorsement followed a brilliant address of City Councillor Laurence J. Curtin, who praised William Randolph Hearst in high terms because of the many public-spirited acts of the publisher.

The resolution, offered by Councillor Curtin, and unanimously passed by the body of which he is a member, follows:

"Resolved—That the Quincy City Council hereby takes cognizance of the laudable proposition presented to the American public by Mr. William Randolph Hearst, designating and setting aside Sunday, April 30, 1933, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer in behalf of the President of the United States.

CRUCIAL TIMES

"And be it further resolved that said City Council hereby enthusiastically and whole-heartedly endorses said action of said Mr. Hearst, recognizing as it well does the crucial times through which our nation has been passing during the past few years, and the splendid and capable manner in which our beloved President and our honorable Congress has set about to effect a speedy and complete recovery from its present plight and the restabilization of our national security.

"And be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the President and Congress of these United States."

Carroll J. Swan, president of the Advertising Club of Boston and a leading member of Crosscup-Fish-on Post, American Legion, in commending the idea, said:

"The plan of the Boston American for a 'President's Day' is splendid.

"I am a Republican and voted for Herbert Hoover, but I'm proud of our new President and his work. All of my friends who are Republicans feel as I do.

REUNITED COUNTRY

"This President of ours is a dynamo of energy. He has done more in a month than previous Presidents have accomplished in years.

"It seems as if he had a bit of a streak of his illustrious cousin, 'Teddy' Roosevelt—that one of the 'big stick.'

"'Frank' Roosevelt was in Harvard College when I was a senior and perhaps with all the other tributes to him it may be pleasing to know that an alma mater is proud of him and his wonderful accomplishments.

"President Roosevelt has reunited our entire country and has brought to East, West, South and North an understanding of present day conditions that he is handling so admirably."

PICNIC PARTY ADMIT PART IN QUARRY DEATH

Still convinced that a rock which dealt death Wednesday to Hugh Lawrence, 18, of Gilmore st., Quincy, was an accident, Quincy police today withheld charges against three young couples who admitted two had hurled rocks into Hitchcock's Quarry.

According to police, the 50-pound rock that killed young Lawrence was rolled over the 150-foot cliff by George Orr, 18, of Berlin st., and Russell Anderson, 16, of West Squantum st., both Quincy. Others in their picnic party were Anderson's sister, Dorothy, 18, Elliott Page, 21, a Tufts College student whose home is at Nutley, N. J., Miss Frances Carlson of South Central ave., Wollaston, Miss Irene Anderson, 16, of Wynter Hill rd., Medford.

All six will be called to testify at an inquest that will be held in Quincy court within the next few weeks.

The six told police that they heard shouts from the quarry at the time they sealed a few smaller stones but thought the shouts were coming from the other side of the huge expanse, where a man was gesticulating.

John Wallis, son of a Newton doctor and companion of the Lawrence boy, said he was the one doing the shouting. He barely escaped the fate of Lawrence.

The three young couples said they were unaware of the accident until they read of the boy's death in the newspapers. One of them then confided in his father and was advised to report the affair to police. Lieut. George W. Fallon questioned all six and said he would ask no complaints pending the inquest.

"SHARLIE" -:- By Beatrice Burton

Sharlie Tells Collins That She Has No Boy Friends; He Takes Her Riding

THE WASHROOM downstairs was empty at that time of day, and she sang to herself as she washed her hands and put a fresh layer of lipstick on her mouth. In the bottom drawer of Edna's desk was a pair of clean white chamois gloves that Edna always kept there in case she wanted to stay downtown for a concert or a lecture or a talkie.

Sharlie pulled them on over her pretty hands. For a second she knew that she was doing an unfair thing in going out like this with the man whom Edna was in love with.

"But I'm in love with him, too," she thought then, "and so is this Mrs. Wilmot. I have just as much right to try to make him like me as she or Edna has." All was fair in love and war. The whole world knew that, and always had.

She snapped the clasps of the gloves and turned to Mr. Collins with a starry look of happiness in her unclouded eyes. "Oh, I think this is going to be more fun!" she said excitedly.

Mr. Collins laughed. "You're like a kid starting out for a circus," he answered her. And that was exactly the impression she had been trying to give him. She wanted to seem very young and innocent to him—much older than either Edna or Mrs. Wilmot.

"I can't remember ever looking forward to circus-day the way I've looked forward to this drive of ours, Mr. Collins." Her thick eyelashes swept down and then up as she gave him a quick demure look. "Perhaps it's because I get so tired of working downtown day after day . . . Sometimes I think I wasn't cut out for office work."

A Little Hurt

Mr. Collins had crossed the room and stood by the door that led to the outer office. He was frowning a bit here thoughtfully.

"I'll tell you what, he said suddenly. "I'll go down and get my car and parked you up at the corner of 13th and Spring sts. In five minutes, say. We don't want the office people to see us going out together, do we?"

Sharlie's face had been in the process of changing from a look of pleasure to one of pain. The building with Mr. Collins' car in front of it would be conspicuous because he did not want them to see him with her.

"Still, I suppose it would start a lot of silly office gossip," she said to herself as she rang for the elevator five minutes later.

Mr. Collins stopped where he was at 13th st and powdered her nose before the mirrors of the waiting car. The fear crushed it made her look unusually fresh and deepened the color in her cheeks. She was better-looking than Mrs. Wilmot, she told herself.

And just then, as she was turning away from the mirror, she saw Mrs. Wilmot. She was walking along on the opposite side of 13th as if she were in a hurry.

Sharlie pulled back into the doorway. Mrs. Wilmot was walking rapidly, as if she were late for an appointment. She was carrying a small package in one of her hands. Evidently she had been doing a little shopping.

She saw a taxi coming along and he held her hand out and the driver stopped. Mrs. Wilmot got in and the taxi drove off.

Sharlie drew a long breath. "Because she likes you!" she thought then. "That was the way to talk to him! Not as if he were his employer. She smiled to herself as she walked back to the corner where Mr. Collins' car was waiting. She would ask him to take a drive with her. A man who was crazy about you couldn't refuse you anything. He always seemed to know what you wanted him to do.

But this wasn't the office—and it wasn't office hours now.

Sharlie laughed. "I shouldn't have said that—but it just slipped out, Mr. Collins," she murmured. "It's the truth, however. I am the sunshine and the crowds. On her breast was a pair of white gardenias tied with silver ribbon that had not been there when she visited Mr. Collins, and she had a small white package in one of her hands. Evidently she had been doing a little shopping.

She saw a taxi coming along and he held her hand out and the driver stopped. Mrs. Wilmot got in and the taxi drove off.

Sharlie drew a long breath. "Because she likes you!" she thought then. "That was the way to talk to him! Not as if he were his employer. She smiled to herself as she walked back to the corner where Mr. Collins' car was waiting. She would ask him to take a drive with her. A man who was crazy about you couldn't refuse you anything. He always seemed to know what you wanted him to do.

But this wasn't the office—and it wasn't office hours now.

Sharlie laughed. "I shouldn't have said that—but it just slipped out, Mr. Collins," she murmured. "It's the truth, however. I am glad you know why I drove away, Sharlie."

Sharlie shrugged her shoulders. "I knew why you left—you didn't want your Mrs. Wilmot to see you meeting your stenographer outside the office!"

"I didn't want her to stop and talk to me. If she had I'd have had to drive her home—"

"While I waited on the corner?" Sharlie interrupted him to ask.

He did not answer.

"She's too old for you," Sharlie said after a minute or two while the motor purred through the traffic. "That's why you don't want to be bothered with her—isn't it?"

Open Roadster

On the opposite corner sat Mr. Collins in his open roadster, smoking a cigarette and watching the crowds intently. Sharlie saw him frown as he caught sight of Mrs. Wilmot. Then he leaned forward and started his car. It turned the corner and disappeared in the traffic of Spring st.

Sharlie did not know what to do. She knew that he had driven away because he did not want Mrs. Wilmot to see her get into his car, and she wondered whether he would come back for her or not. In all probability he would, when he thought Mrs. Wilmot had had time to get away from the corner.

Three minutes went by. Sharlie stood at the doorway of the Owl ating store and watched Mrs. Wilmot hail a taxicab and ride away in it.

It was a full half hour before the puffing, panting car drew near once more. By that time the street was filled with blue gray dusk and Sharlie's feet ached from standing so long. She smiled down on the cafe seat of the cab in which she sat—a sigh of relief.

"I thought you were never coming back, Mr. Collins," she said. "I was just giving you up."

Too Old for Him

"You knew I'd come back for you just as well as you knew why I drove away, Sharlie."

Sharlie shrugged her shoulders. "I knew why you left—you didn't want your Mrs. Wilmot to see you meeting your stenographer outside the office!"

"I didn't want her to stop and talk to me. If she had I'd have had to drive her home—"

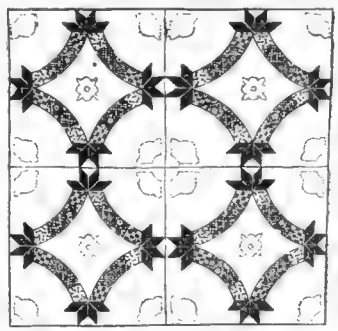
"While I waited on the corner?" Sharlie interrupted him to ask.

He did not answer.

"She's too old for you," Sharlie said after a minute or two while the motor purred through the traffic. "That's why you don't want to be bothered with her—isn't it?"

PATCHWORK QUILT

By LAURA WHEELER



Friendship Knot No. 410

THE QUAINT TITLE of this quilt Friendship Knot, is appropriate to the design made of small scraps of material joined together with a knot of plain material. Like the popular Wedding Ring pattern, it is economical to make if one saves pieces of cast-off clothing. The varieties of colors used make it a quilt that fits well into many rooms. The patchwork design can be enhanced by the addition of small quilting motifs at the center and corners of the block.

The pattern is in one size only and for hand or machine piecing. Allow 4 yards of 36-inch material for the blocks, 4 yards for the plain material, quilting motifs, and cover.

To obtain a pattern for this design send 10c to Boston Evening American Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth ave., New York.

She was sitting in the corner of the seat with her eyes on Mr Collins' face as she spoke. She saw him smile to himself for an instant.

"You know I can't answer a question like that, young woman," he said, and then he gave a short bark of laughter.

"Why don't you like Mrs. Wilmot, Sharlie?"

Sharlie drew a long breath. "Because she likes you!"

"There, that was the way to talk to him!" Not as if he were his employer. She smiled to herself as she walked back to the corner where Mr. Collins' car was waiting. Hijacked Officer Gets 210 Hours Punishment Duty

Patrolman Richard M. Mackey of the Back Bay station today started a 30-day suspension and 210 hours of punishment duty after being found guilty by a trial board of gross incompetence and neglect of duty and of conduct unbecoming an officer.

The charge of incompetence and neglect of duty resulted after Mackey had been held up by pickpocket robbed of his gun at the Miner st. garage in Beacon st. Back Bay, last March 31. When leaving the gunmen told him he would find his gun at Beacon and Miner sts. He retrieved the weapon there.

The second charge, that of conduct unbecoming an officer, resulted from the fact that he did not report the holdup, which occurred at 1 a. m. until 2:30 a. m., when he met Sergt. Charles F. Eldridge in the street.

Harvard "Math" Team Tapers Off With Skull Practice

Weekly workouts in small squads and lectures once a week feature the training of Harvard's new competitive team—the mathematics team—which is winging into its last week of training before the Army games May 19 and 20.

The contest grows out of a challenge issued by the Army on the occasion of the last Harvard-Army football game. It is being sponsored by a fund given by Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, a sister of President Lowell, to promote scholastic as well as athletic rivalry between colleges.

The match will be played at West Point under rules drawn up by a conference of mathematics professors of the two institutions. Prof. Arnold Dresden of Swarthmore will act as referee, setting and correcting the examinations.

A two-hour examination and another of three hours in analytic geometry will be the tests. Scoring of rival teams has been taken care of in a spirit of complete friendliness, by an exchange of the usual examination papers used at each college.

The Harvard team was selected on a basis of freshman and sophomore marks, and recommendations of tutors and instructors. An original squad of 24 was cut to a working squad of 13 by Head Coach Julian Coolidge, and his assistants Profs. D. V. Witter and Marston Morse. Cuts were made on the basis of results of two hour exams given the squad.

The 13 men remaining after the cut, are E. M. Cook, Josiah Darby, T. M. Feldman, R. M. Fisher, W. B. Giunta, J. P. Farquhar, J. J. Guanio, T. J. Karey, A. L. Lindstrum, William Maltzman, David Rome, H. E. Robbins, and R. D. Sard. The full squad will go to West Point, although under the rules, only 10 men may take the blackboard on each side.

The reports from West Point indicate that a well-trained team of sound calculators will defend Gray and Gold.

Taxation and Pensions Blamed by This Reader for Unrest

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I have received an interesting letter in regard to my digest of Mr. Sokolsky's article in a recent issue of "The New Outlook." Although the letter is long and anonymous, it seems worth giving to you, except for the first paragraphs which contain a considerable amount of rather labored irony at Mr. Sokolsky's expense. The letter goes on:

R. E. ROGERS

"Mr. Sokolsky says that nobody is talking of revolution. Lincoln Steffens, author, lecturer, and noted investigator of governmental affairs, who is better fitted to judge than Mr. Sokolsky, said in an address on April 5, that this country is today a hundred times more ready for Communism than Russia ever was."

I break in here to remark that Mr. Steffens' days of active participation in social movements must be about over. He is an old man. He never was particularly right about the temper of the American people, when he was active. He virtually confesses in his "Autobiography" that his brand of liberal anarchism was a mistake and made no impression on the American people. Mr. Sokolsky is young, an active investigator, and a trained journalist. I think I would sooner trust him than Steffens, who always had the habit of seeing what he wanted to see.

Need of Revolution Stressed

"I am not a communist nor a bolshevist but a Boston born-and-bred representative of the so-called 'middle class'; and many years older than you (I am 70); have had many years of experience as a newspaper man in Boston; have been in closer contact with the man in the street than either you or Mr. Sokolsky; and I can assure you that there is a very strong undercurrent of discontent among the working classes of this country.

"I have lived for a dozen years in different towns in Northern New England and was in daily contact with the working classes throughout Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. No Communism in those places! And still you would be surprised to learn how common it was to hear the expression 'What this country needs is a revolution!'"

Mingling with the small merchants, store keepers, and the working classes in shops and mills, I have heard that expression used hundreds of times. And, believe it or not, by Northern New England Yankees as well as by aliens! Returning to Boston, I find the same sentiment prevailing among the working classes.

"I find that one of the principal causes of unrest and discontent is that most hated of all forms of taxation, the pensioning of government workers, federal, state and municipal. It is looked upon as the most iniquitous burden ever imposed on a nation. Americans hate class distinction; they hate aristocracies; and a labor aristocracy is as bad as any other. Why pension a favored minority?

"Why, in the name of all that is fair and just, should the poor laborer, the mechanic, the clerk, the storekeeper, the property owner, who furnish the finances by taxation to conduct the nation's business, be discriminated against in favor of those who are given lucrative employment and assume no risks or lapses in income, and who after receiving high wages for years, are granted a life pension on half pay? It is both ridiculous and tragic!

Eliminate All Pensions Except for Injured

"Consider for a moment: The civilian working classes furnish the finances to pay the salaries of this favored minority, whose wages are, in 90 cases out of a hundred, far greater than they ever could earn in civilian life; and after enjoying these lucrative positions for many years, they are given life pensions which are, in countless cases, greater than the pensioner could ever have earned during his life outside of government service.

"I personally know pensioned ex-members of the fire and police departments of this city who never, by any stretch of the imagination, could have earned during their life the wages they receive as a pension. If the pensions were eliminated, you would not find one in a hundred resigning from their positions. Cheap politicians and crooked so-called statesmen, who misrepresent the public, endeavoring to carry favor with the voters, have imposed this vast army of pensioned parasites on a tax-burdened people, and the pension system, like a cancerous growth, has stretched its tentacles into all branches of public service, draining the life-blood of our economic system.

"Let us eliminate all pensions for public employes, save those who have become incapacitated in the line of duty. Then all branches of our government can quickly balance their budgets. There should be no place in our economic system for a favored class of employes—an organized gang of pensioned parasites.

"If Mr. Sokolsky would take a few trips in 'side-door pullmans' and hear the discussions of the vast army of the unemployed who are roaming about the country looking for work, he will quickly get a new slant on the opinions of the working classes, who are the ones who will carry on, if trouble comes. Let him keep his head out of the clouds and put his ear to the ground and he will hear unmistakable rumblings of rumblings of revolution."

The gentleman signs himself only "Stylus" because he does not wish to get into any controversy with the many office holders of his acquaintance.

Demand for Reform Getting Underway

The letter is interesting because obviously Mr. Sokolsky and my correspondent are using the word "revolution" in different senses. Sokolsky meant, of course, the kind of Socialist or Communist revolution which the bankers and business men are afraid of, which would inevitably socialize the state even further than at present, increase taxes enormously and dump large classes of the population on the public pay-roll. Instead of pensions for public office holders, we should probably, under a Socialistic revolution, have pensions for all workers.

I take it that my correspondent is an old line individualist, who would like to get back to a condition of Jeffersonian simplicity in government; to cut down the number of public offices, to limit their functions and their wages, to make public office once more a public trust and not a public feed trough. All that is highly laudable. As an ideal I share it heartily, however improbable and utopian it is. But such a turning back of the clock is certainly not what the average man means by revolution.

When the average unemployed worker uses that word, he means, not a means of lessening the burdens of the taxpayer but a means by which the unemployed worker himself can get on the public pay-roll. It is perfectly possible that we shall have to come to that, whether my correspondent likes it or not. That will be a revolution!

My correspondent in his demand "turn the rascals out" is only advocating a reform in the existing machinery, which is obviously in process of getting under way, very slowly and with tremendous opposition. But the position of the office holder is not as comfortable as it used to be.

BRIGHTON MAN HELD IN ARSON INQUIRY

Police Claim Gordon Offered to "Fix" Police on Case

Police will seek a warrant today in Municipal Court charging Jacob M. Gordon with attempting to extort in connection with an alleged racket, in which names of members of the police arson squad were used to obtain money from persons in whose homes fires were under probe.

Gordon, who is 35 and lives in Commonwealth ave., Brighton, was arrested in a Back Bay hotel and was held today for questioning. At the conclusion of a long grilling police officials said they would seek a warrant.

MARKED BILLS PASSED

Police said he had used the names of Detectives Peter A. DiSessa and Salvatore DiNatsli of the arson squad in saying he could "fix" authorities in the probe of a fire in the home of William H. Levy of Crawford st., Roxbury. Police have been probing rumors of the alleged use of names for several months and yesterday they received a direct tip that Levy might be of help to them in tracing the rumors.

Detectives Henry A. Donovan and Albert L. Caulfield went to Levy's home and he admitted that Gordon had communicated with him and offered to "fix" the police. The officers had Levy telephone Gordon and make an appointment in the Back Bay hotel. The officers listened in on an extension and say they heard Gordon state he could take care of the authorities.

ARRESTED LEAVING ROOM

At the hotel Levy was given $50 in marked bills and entered a room, Gordon went in a short time later and when he came out he was placed under arrest. Police say he had not accepted the money but in the room they found a piece of paper bearing the names of DiSessa and DiNatali, which Gordon admitted writing.

According to police, Levy said Gordon refused to name any definite amount as time he would have to communicate with the officers. He was leaving the room, apparently to telephone to them, when he was arrested, Levy said. At police headquarters Gordon denied any attempt to extort.

Shotgun Wound Costs Man Hand

Kenneth C. Lincoln, 42, Boston real estate dealer, was recovering at Cambridge Hospital today from the effects of an operation which necessitated the amputation of his left hand at the wrist.

Lincoln, who lives in Gray Gardens East, Cambridge, suffered an infection which made the amputation necessary when a shotgun shell, which he was ramming with caps, exploded.

Committee Head

Mabel Louise Crawford, of Belmont, is active on the ticket committee of the third annual Costume Bal Des Artistes, that will be held at the Hotel Bradford, Friday evening. Boston's society and artist colony will be well represented.

BROUSE FRAUD CASE TO JURY

The case of William A. Brouse, charged with using the mails to defraud Roswell B. Clark, retired Putnam, Ct., business man, of $63,658.27, will go to the jury in Federal District Court today.

Brouse was brought to trial before Judge Hugh D. McClennan yesterday after many delays. On two witnesses were presented by the government and Brouse did not testify. Judge McClennan will charge the jury today and then give them the case for deliberation.

It is possible that an appeal from a plea in bar made Tuesday may be taken to the circuit court of appeals. Attorneys for Brouse contend the court has no jurisdiction since more than three years elapsed between the date of the alleged crime and the arrest of Brouse.

Record Witness List at Lineup

The largest number of witnesses in months is expected at the police headquarters lineup today as a result of Deputy Supt. Anderson's teletyps order to all divisions to send in victims of all holdups and robberies in the past six months.

At least a score of witnesses were expected at yesterday's lineup but only three appeared. The order was then issued with instructions that a written report be sent in when witnesses refused or were unable to appear.

1207 Officers Take Test

The competitive civil service examination for eligibility for promotion to sergeant, postponed several weeks ago because of the bank holiday, will be taken by 1207 Boston patrolmen at Girls' high school today.

McKnight Bribe Charge to Go to Jury on Monday

The presentation of evidence in the case of Edwin T. McKnight, former president of the closed Medford Trust Co., charged with larceny and conspiracy, will be completed in Middlesex Superior Court before Judge Walter L. Collins today.

McKnight, who was sworn in as a witness when the defense opened yesterday, will not take the stand, his counsel, Atty. Daniel J. Gallagher, declared. Only one defense witness will be put on the stand before Atty. Gallagher rests his case, according to his announcement in court yesterday.

Final arguments are not expected today as Judge Collins plans to attend the funeral of Judge Webster Thayer in Worcester.

McKnight is charged with larceny of $23,000 from Frankini Bros., contractors; conspiracy to bribe municipal officials and receiving fees illegally while an officer of the Medford Trust Co.

Although five witnesses, including McKnight, were sworn in by the defense, only two testified. They were Marion E. Pike of Jamaica Plan, bookkeeper for Eaton & McKnight, and Lillian A. Coates, Haverlock, N. B., McKnight's sister.

Atty. Gallagher then declared that in view of the concession of the government that McKnight was in Canada from July 1 to about July 15, 1929, he would not call the other witnesses

MAYOR PRAISES ROOSEVELT'S GOLD STAND

Curley Hailed as Governor by Jefferson League Diners

A prediction that President Roosevelt, before his four-year term is ended, will have completed the development of the Mississippi river was made by Mayor Curley, speaking at the annual dinner of the Thomas Jefferson League at the Bellevue Hotel.

"He will make the same contribution as was made by Thomas Jefferson, in the Louisiana purchase. The development of Muscle Shoals and the Tennessee river can lead to but one result, development of the great Mississippi."

CHEERS GREET MAYOR

The President, he declared, appreciates the importance of this great project, tapping as it does 26 of the 48 states of the nation. He stated that it will give us a new coal area and a new and added opportunity.

The mayor was received enthusiastically by the diners. In introducing him, President Whitfield Tuck of the league declined his readiness to take his coat off to back the mayor for any position he may desire to run. At this juncture a voice near the head table shouted "governor."

In opening, the mayor said it had been a pleasure for him to participate in the last presidential campaign, that he had done so without any hope of reward other than the rendering of a service to the people. Because of his position as mayor of one of the largest cities, he said, he was in a position at the time to realize the seriousness of the situation facing the country and the need of electing Franklin D. Roosevelt to the presidency.

PRAISES GOLD STAND

The Mayor said that there are no means to determine what the future has in store, but that no man in history has brought to his aide a more interesting group than the President. He praised the President highly for his courageous action in going off the gold standard.

Jefferson, he said, brought about equality, while President Roosevelt has brought about independence of the banks.

Other speakers included former Atty-Gen. Thomas J. Boynton, John F. Doherty, J. Joseph McManus, William H. McMasters, John L. McDonald, John A. Kigeen and Francis X. Tyrrell.

MAYOR REFUSES TANK PERMIT

Storage of 80,000 barrels of rangeoil in East First st., South Boston has been denied the White Fuel Corp. by the board of street commissioners as a result of a protest by South Boston citizens.

In announcing the rejection, Mayor Curley pointed out that only one objector appeared in opposition to the project when the petition was formally made by the oil company.

He added that permission was granted because of the fact that range oil is no more combustible than coal. In view of the fact, protest, however, the commissioners revoked the permit, but with the provision that the oil company may later apply. At that time a hearing will be held for those who wish to enter protest.

Beer Licenses Up to Melrose Voters

While Mayor Robert A. Perkins of Melrose insists that not a single application for a beer license has been filed with him and that no licenses are therefore to be granted, Alderman Philip B. Carruthers has asked that a special election be held June 16 to determine if the citizens desire to have beer sold in Melrose.

A few days after his transfer, Pendie telephoned to ask me to dine. The President was in bed, of course, and visitors were forbidden, so that there would be only Peale and herself at dinner. When I arrived Pendie was alone, Peale having been detained by a campaign committee meeting. We had our cocktails in the library. There Pendie told me that she was glad we had an opportunity to chat before her husband arrived because she wanted my advice.

Further talk was cut short by the arrival of Connelly to say that the President was awake, and was asking for Miss Malloy. Would she please go up for a moment?

A few minutes later she came down again. She had told the President I was in the house and he had said he would like to see me. As I accompanied her up the stairs she halted me on the landing to say "Instead of talking nonsense, I ought to have warned you to be prepared for a shock. You will find him greatly altered. There's no time now to tell you more, but act as if you did not notice any change and watch every word you speak."

Wonderingly I entered the bedroom. My astonishment was the physical change in the President. He was propped up in bed with pillows. I had expected to find a very sick man, and at first glance his bandaged head grey lined features and bluish lips suggested this. As I drew nearer, however, I saw that he appeared to be much better than at any time during the last year or two.

His look of strain had gone. The grim lines about his mouth and the hard angularity of his lower jaw had softened. His eyes appeared more blue than ever, but their usual arctic bleakness was replaced by gentleness and humor. They actually twinkled as I shook hands with him.

I murmured some commonplace about his looking so much better than I had barely finished speaking, when as unexpectedly as thunder on a sunny day the President laughed the great hearty booming laugh we had not heard for nearly four years. I stepped back and in took Pendie's silent finger signal to keep me from betraying my astonishment.

"Heck, my boy," the President said, the laughter still lingering in his voice, "you are the perfect secretary, the quintessence of tactfulness, and you're also the biggest liar, with the exception of Pendie, on my staff. Looking better, am I? I must have been a sight before, then." His laugh boomed out again. "However, at my time of life looks cease to matter. I can still give parties and have fun—with friends like you and Pendie to flatter me."

Still bewildered and uncertain, I smiled and said, "Yes, and I think you'll find Peale Lindsey and even a bigger admirer than either Pendie or me."

His face screwed up in a puzzled frown. "Lindsey?" he repeated "Who's he? Oh, yes, a friend of yours—the publicity man, isn't he? I must get to know him better."

I was about to remind him that Peale was also Pendie's husband, when I caught a look of acute anxiety on her face, from which I gathered that I was to say no more about Peale. Pendie took up trivial conversation, and soon insisting that the President must not be excited too long by visitors, signalled me to go.

When Pendie joined me in the library she did what, for her was an unusual thing. She poured herself another cocktail and I noticed that her hand trembled as she raised it to her lips. She looked at me over the rim of the glass and there was a challenge in her voice.

"Well?" she asked defiantly.

"It's beyond me, Pendie. I don't understand a thing, but it's good to see the Major his old self again."

She came over and sat down by me.

"Yes," she said thoughtfully, hide to the greatest of tragedies." "it is good, if it isn't just a pre-

"Tragedy?"

"Yes, tragedy, not only for poor old Jud, but for everybody." She paused for a long moment. Her voice had a slow intensity when she continued, "Heck, he doesn't listen any more."

"Listen? What on earth—oh, your old friend Gabriel."

She rested her hand on my arm.

WEALTHY TALES ARE DENIED BY BRILLIANDT

Miss Stallins Describes Engagement Party on Stand

Although Samuel Brilliandt, Belmont hardware dealer, refused to marry her, Miss Anna Stallins of Auburn st., West End, his former finance, testified, he refused to permit any other man to have her either and threatened to "put a bullet through his head."

With protestations of love for her as "the only woman in the world for me," he failed to marry her, she declared in her $55,000 breach of promise suit in Suffolk Superior Court before Judge Bishop and a jury.

LOVE DIED, SHE SAYS

The young woman told of losing weight, suffering loss of appetite, torn by the anguish of "humiliation, shame and hurt" by being jilted by the man she loved, in court stated that now she no longer loved Brilliandt.

"I loved Sam," she testified, "but shortly after April 5, 1931, when he told me he was through with me, that loved died."

Brilliandt pictured by the girl in her court story as a man of considerable wealth for whom his mother sought a rich girl in matrimony, took the stand in defense of the suit and denied any riches.

To this Judge and jury he told of receiving only $10 weekly for working in his father's hardware store in Waverley, a picture directly in contrast to the man Miss Stallins described on the stand.

To her, she said, he told of owning one hardware store independently and sharing the profits of three others with his father with whom he was partners.

GRAYED AFTER JILTING

However, in his story, Brilliandt related that at the time of his engagement to Miss Stallins he was receiving $40 weekly, but that times were not so good as they were then.

Mrs. Mary F. Springer, a sister, living in the same house as Miss Stallins, described the engagement party and told of the breaking of two plates in keeping with the traditional Jewish custom of committing the engaged couples to happiness.

In reciting her own story, Miss Stallins, who says she is planning a $25 deposit with the officials of a Roxbury hall where the wedding was scheduled for June 17, 1931, and of placing a similar amount on the day down on a honeymoon set.

"I was so happy, then," she said.

CITY WORKERS FACE NEW CUT

City heads today faced a problem in cutting appropriations to fit the $36,750,000 limit allowed by the legislative committee on municipal finance.

The sum is nearly $4,000,000 less than the limit set for this year, and $750,000 under the mark asked by Mayor Curley for this year.

A per-capita basis is used in the bill, however, whereby Boston may be authorized to spend additional money for municipal purposes, provided authority is given by the board, composed of the attorney-general, state treasurer and the state director of municipal finance.

The legislative allowance was above the limit set by the Finance Commission and the Municipal Research bureau, the former being $35,886,000, and the bureau estimate $36,200,000.

Council Postpones Move on Constables

Action on the reappointment of 141 Boston constables for this year has been held up until next Tuesday by the City Council's special committee, which is investigating the records of the applicants.

A number of the applicants are alleged to have overstepped their legal authority in recent months.

POLICE GUARD JURIST'S BODY

Worcester, April 21—Even as police have kept watch over him in the 13 years of Sacco-Vanzetti agitation, Judge Webster Thayer was guarded in death today as his funeral hour approached.

Patrolmen were stationed at Sessions' Funeral Parlor, Pleasant st., not far from the late home of Judge Thayer that was bombed last September.

Streets in the vicinity of St. Matthew's Church, were barred to parkers and a motorcycle escort was ordered for escort from the funeral parlor to the church.

Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg and Justice John C. Crosby, close friends of Judge Thayer, represented Massachusetts Supreme Court. Twenty of the 32 Superior Court judges were also included in the mourners.

Stabbing Victim Feared Near Death

The condition of Thomas Brennan, 21, of Lafayette st., Quincy, was reported as serious at City Hospital early today. He was stabbed in the neck in a scuffle at Massachusetts ave. and St. Botolph st., Back Bay, early yesterday.

Clarence Tyler, 24, of West Springfield st., and Kenneth Cook, [illegible] of Braddock pk., both of the South End, were identified by Brennan as his assailants and are being held in bonds of $5000 each.

Hijacked Officer Gets 210 Hours Punishment Duty

Patrolman Richard M. Mackey, of the Back Bay station, today started a 30-day suspension and 210 hours of punishment duty after being found guilty by a trial board of gross incompetence and neglect of duty and of conduct unbecoming an officer.

The charge of incompetence and neglect of duty resulted after Mackey had been held up by hijackers and robbed of his gun at the Miner st. garage in Beacon st. Back Bay, last March 31. When leaving the gunmen told him he would find his gun at Beacon and Miner sts. He retrieved the weapon there.

The second charge, that of conduct unbecoming an officer, resulted from the fact that he did not report the holdup, which occurred at 1 a. m. until 2.20 a. m., when he met Sergt. Charles F. Eldridge in the street.

Harvard "Math" Team Tapers Off With Skull Practice

Weekly workouts in small squads and lectures once a week feature the training of Harvard's new competitive team—the mathematics team—which is winging into its last week of training before the Army games May 19 and 20.

The contest grows out of a challenge issued by the Army on the occasion of the last Harvard-Army football game. It is being sponsored by a fund given by Mrs. William Lowell Putnam, a sister of President Lowell, to promote scholastic as well as athletic rivalry between colleges.

The match will be played at West Point under rules drawn up by a conference of mathematics professors of the two institutions. Prof. Arnold Dresden of Swarthmore, will act as referee, setting and correcting the examinations.

A two-hour examination, and another of three hours in analytic geometry will be the tests. Scoring of rival teams has been taken care of in a spirit of complete friendliness, by an exchange of the usual examination papers used at each college.

The Harvard team was selected on a basis of freshman and sophomore marks, and recommendations of tutors and instructors. An original squad of 24 was cut to a working squad of 13 by Head Coach Julian Coolidge, and his assistants Profs. D. V. Witter and Marston Morse. Cuts were made on the basis of results of two hour exams given the squad.

The 13 men remaining after the cut, are E. M. Cook, Josiah Derby, T. M. Feldman, R. M. Fisher, W. B. Giunta, J. P. Farquhar, J. J. Gianio, T. J. Kacey, A. L. Lindstrum, William Maltzman, David Rome, H. E. Robbins, and R. D. Sard. The full squad will go to West Point, although under the rules, only 10 men may take the blackboard on each side.

The reports from West Point indicate that a well-trained team of sound calculators will defend Gray and Gold.

Taxation and Pensions Blamed by This Reader for Unrest

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I have received an interesting letter in regard to my digest of Mr. Sokolsky's article in a recent issue of "The New Outlook." Although the letter is long and anonymous, it seems worth giving to you, except for the first paragraphs which contain a considerable amount of rather labored irony at Mr. Sokolsky's expense. The letter goes on:

R. E. ROGERS

"Mr. Sokolsky says that nobody is talking of revolution. Lincoln Steffens, author, lecturer, and noted investigator of governmental affairs, who is better fitted to judge than Mr. Sokolsky, said in an address on April 5, that this country is today a hundred times more ready for Communism than Russia ever was."

I break in here to remark that Mr. Steffens' days of active participation in social movements must be about over. He is an old man. He never was particularly right about the temper of the American people, when he was active. He virtually confesses in his "Autobiography" that his brand of liberal anarchism was a mistake and made no impression on the American people. Mr. Sokolsky is young, an active investigator, and a trained journalist. I think I would sooner trust him than Steffens, who always had the habit of seeing what he wanted to see.

Need of Revolution Stressed

"I am not a communist nor a bolshevist but a Boston born-and-bred representative of the so-called 'middle class'; and many years older than you (I am 70); have had many years of experience as a newspaper man in Boston; have been in closer contact with the man in the street than either you or Mr. Sokolsky; and I can assure you that there is a very strong undercurrent of discontent among the working classes of this country.

"I have lived for a dozen years in different towns in Northern New England and was in daily contact with the working classes throughout Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. No Communism in those places! And still you would be surprised to learn how common it was to hear the expression 'What this country needs is a revolution!'"

Mingling with the small merchants, store keepers, and the working classes in shops and mills, I have heard that expression used hundreds of times. And, believe it or not, by Northern New England Yankees as well as by aliens! Returning to Boston, I find the same sentiment prevailing among the working classes.

"I find that one of the principal causes of unrest and discontent is that most hated of all forms of taxation, the pensioning of government workers, federal, state and municipal. It is looked upon as the most iniquitous burden ever imposed on a nation. Americans hate class distinction; they hate aristocracies; and a labor aristocracy is as bad as any other. Why pension a favored minority?

"Why, in the name of all that is fair and just, should the poor laborer, the mechanic, the clerk, the storekeeper, the property owner, who furnish the finances by taxation to conduct the nation's business, be discriminated against in favor of those who are given lucrative employment and assume no risks or lapses in income, and who after receiving high wages for years, are granted a life pension on half pay? It is both ridiculous and tragic!

Eliminate All Pensions Except for Injured

"Consider for a moment: The civilian working classes furnish the finances to pay the salaries of this favored minority, whose wages are, in 90 cases out of a hundred, far greater than they ever could earn in civilian life; and after enjoying these lucrative positions for many years, they are given life pensions which are, in countless cases, greater than the pensioner could ever have earned during his life outside of government service.

"I personally know pensioned ex-members of the fire and police departments of this city who never, by any stretch of the imagination, could have earned during their life the wages they receive as a pension. If the pensions were eliminated, you would not find one in a hundred resigning from their positions. Cheap politicians and crooked so-called statesmen, who misrepresent the public, endeavoring to carry favor with the voters, have imposed this vast army of pensioned parasites on a tax-burdened people, and the pension system, like a cancerous growth, has stretched its tentacles into all branches of public service, draining the lifeblood of our economic system.

"Let us eliminate all pensions for public employes, save those who have become incapacitated in the line of duty. Then all branches of our government can quickly balance their budgets. There should be no place in our economic system for a favored class of employes—an organized gang of pensioned parasites.

"If Mr. Sokolsky would take a few trips in 'side-door pullmans' and hear the discussions of the vast army of the unemployed who are roaming about the country looking for work, he will quickly get a new slant on the opinions of the working classes, who are the ones who will carry on, if trouble comes. Let him keep his head out of the clouds and put his ear to the ground and he will hear unmistakable rumblings of rumblings of revolution."

The gentleman signs himself only "Stylus" because he does not wish to get into any controversy with the many office holders of his acquaintance.

Demand for Reform Getting Underway

The letter is interesting because obviously Mr. Sokolsky and my correspondent are using the word "revolution" in different senses. Sokolsky meant, of course, the kind of Socialist or Communist revolution which the banke·s and business men are afraid of, which would inevitably socialize the state even further than at present, increase taxes enormously and dump large classes of the population on the public pay-roll. Instead of pensions for public office holders, we should probably, under a Socialistic revolution, have pensions for all workers.

I take it that my correspondent is an old line individualist, who would like to get back to a condition of Jeffersonian simplicity in government; to cut down the number of public offices, to limit their functions and their wages, to make public office once more a public trust and not a public feed trough. All that is highly laudable. As an ideal I share it heartily, however improbable and utopian it is. But such a turning back of the clock is certainly not what the average man means by revolution.

When the average unemployed worker uses that word, he means, not a means of lessening the burdens of the taxpayer but a means by which the unemployed worker himself can get on the public pay-roll. It is perfectly possible that we shall have to come to that, whether my correspondent likes it or not. That will be a revolution!

My correspondent in his demand "turn the rascals out" is only advocating a reform in the existing machinery, which is obviously in process of getting under way, very slowly and with tremendous opposition. But the position of the office holder is not as comfortable as it used to be.

BRIGHTON MAN HELD IN ARSON INQUIRY

Police Claim Gordon Offered to "Fix" Police on Case

Police will seek a warrant today in Municipal Court charging Jacob M. Gordon with attempting to extort in connection with an alleged racket, in which names of members of the police arson squad were used to obtain money from persons in whose homes fires were under probe.

Gordon, who is 35 and lives in Commonwealth ave., Brighton, was arrested in a Back Bay hotel and was held today for questioning. At the conclusion of a long grilling police officials said they would seek a warrant.

MARKED BILLS PASSED

Police said he had used the names of Detectives Peter A. Dussan and Salvatore DiNatali of the arson squad in saying he could "fix" authorities in the probe of a fire in the home of William H. Levy of Crawford st., Roxbury. Police have been probing rumors of the alleged use of names for several months and yesterday they received a direct tip that Levy might be of help to them in tracing the rumors.

Detectives Henry A. Donovan and Albert L. Caulfield went to Levy's home and he admitted that Gordon had communicated with him and offered to "fix" the police. The officers had Levy telephone Gordon and make an appointment in the Back Bay hotel. The officers listened in on an extension and say they heard Gordon state he could take care of the authorities.

ARRESTED LEAVING ROOM

At the hotel Levy was given $50 in marked bills and entered a room, Gordon went in a short time later and when he came out he was placed under arrest. Police say he had not accepted the money but in the room they found a piece of paper bearing the names of Dussan and DiNatali, which Gordon admitted writing.

According to police, Levy said Gordon refused to name any definite amount saying he would have to communicate with the officers. He was leaving the room, apparently to telephone to them, when he was arrested, Levy said. At police headquarters Gordon denied any attempt to extort.

Shotgun Wound Costs Man Hand

Kenneth C. Lincoln, 42, Boston real estate dealer, was recovering at Cambridge Hospital today from the effects of an operation which necessitated the amputation of his left hand at the wrist.

Lincoln, who lives in Gray Gardens East, Cambridge, suffered an infection which made the amputation necessary when a shotgun shell, which he was ramming with caps, exploded.

Committee Head

Mabel Louise Crawford, of Belmont, is active on the ticket committee of the third annual Costume Bal Des Artistes, that will be held at the Hotel Bradford, Friday evening. Boston's society and artist colony will be well represented.

BROUSE FRAUD CASE TO JURY

The case of William A. Brouse, charged with using the mails to defraud Roswell B. Clark, retired Putnam, Ct., business man, of $63,636.37, will go to the jury in Federal District Court today.

Brouse was brought to trial before Judge Hugh D. McGlennan yesterday after many delays. Only two witnesses were presented by the government and Brouse did not testify. Judge McGlennan will charge the jury today and then give them the case for deliberation.

It is possible that an appeal from a plea in bar made Tuesday may be taken to the circuit court of appeals. Attorneys for Brouse contend the court has no jurisdiction since the three years elapsed between the date of the alleged crime and the arrest of Brouse.

Record Witness List at Lineup

The largest number of witnesses in months is expected at the police headquarters lineup today as a result of Deputy Supt. Anderson's teletype order to all divisions to send in victims of all holdups and robberies in the past six months.

At least a score of witnesses were expected at yesterday's lineup but only three appeared. The order was then issued with instructions that a written report be sent in when witnesses refused or were unable to appear.

1207 Officers Take Test

The competitive civil service examination for eligibility for promotion to sergeant, postponed several weeks ago because of the bank holiday, will be taken by 1207 Boston patrolmen at Girls' high school today.

McKnight Bribe Charge to Go to Jury on Monday

The presentation of evidence in the case of Edwin T. McKnight, former president of the closed Medford Trust Co., charged with larceny and conspiracy, will be completed in Middlesex Superior Court before Judge Walter L. Collins today.

McKnight, who was sworn in as a witness when the defense opened yesterday, will not take the stand, his counsel, Atty. Daniel J. Gallagher, declared. Only one defense witness will be put on the stand before Atty. Gallagher rests his case, according to his announcement in court yesterday.

Final arguments are not expected today as Judge Collins plans to attend the funeral of Judge Webster Thayer in Worcester.

McKnight is charged with larceny of $23,000 from Frankini Bros., contractors; conspiracy to bribe municipal officials and receiving fees illegally while an officer of the Medford Trust Co.

Although five witnesses, including McKnight, were sworn in by the defense, only two testified. They were Marion E. Pike of Jamaica Plan, bookkeeper for Eaton & McKnight, and Lillian A. Coates Haverlock, N. B., McKnight's sister.

Atty. Gallagher then declared that in view of the concession of the government that McKnight was in Canada from July 1 to about July 15, 1925, he would not call the other witnesses.

MAYOR PRAISES ROOSEVELT'S GOLD STAND

Curley Hailed as Governor by Jefferson League Diners

A prediction that President Roosevelt, before his four-year term is ended, will have completed the development of the Mississippi river was made by Mayor Curley, speaking at the annual dinner of the Thomas Jefferson League at the Bellevue Hotel.

"He will make the same contribution as was made by Thomas Jefferson, in the Louisiana purchase. The development of Muscle Shoals and the Tennessee river can lead to but one result, development of the great Mississippi."

CHEERS GREET MAYOR

The President, he declared, appreciates the importance of this great project, tapping as it does 26 of the 48 states of the nation. He stated that it will give us a new coast line and a new and added opportunity.

The mayor was received enthusiastically by the diners. In contrast to Mr. Curley's praise of President Roosevelt, Chief Justice William Howard Taft of the league declared his readiness to take his coat off to back the mayor for any position he may desire to run. At this junction a voice near the head table shouted "governor."

In opening, the mayor said it had been a pleasure for him to participate in the last presidential campaign that he had done so without any hope of reward other than the rendering of a service to the people. Because of his position as mayor of one of the largest cities, he said, he was in a position at the time to realize the seriousness of the situation facing the country and the need of electing Franklin D. Roosevelt to the presidency.

PRAISES GOLD STAND

The Mayor said that there are no means to determine what the future has in store, but that no man in history has brought to his aid a more interesting group than the President. He praised the President highly for his courageous action in going off the gold standard.

Jefferson, he said, brought about equality while President Roosevelt has brought about independence of the banker.

Other speakers included former Atty.-Gen. Thomas J. Boynton, John F. Doherty, J. Joseph Mc-Manus, William H. McMasters, John L. McDonald, John A. Kiggen and Francis X. Tyrrell.

MAYOR REFUSES TANK PERMIT

Storage of 80,000 barrels of range oil in East First st., South Boston, has been denied by the Mayor. Corp. by the board of street commissioners as a result of a protest by South Boston citizens.

In announcing the rejection, Mayor Curley pointed out that only one petition appeared in opposition to the project when application was formally made by the oil company.

He added that permission was granted because of the fact that range oil is no more combustible than coal. In view of the later protest, however, the commissioners revoked the permit, but with the provision that the oil company may later apply. At that time a hearing will be held for those who wish to enter protest.

Beer Licenses Up to Melrose Voters

While Mayor Robert A. Perkins of Melrose insists that not a single application for a beer license has been filed with him and that no licenses are therefore to be granted, Alderman Philip B. Carruthers has asked that a special election be held May 16 to determine if the citizens desire to have been sold in Melrose

A few days after his transfer, Pendie telephoned to ask me to dine. The President was in bed, of course, and visitors were forbidden, so that there would be only Peale and herself at dinner. When I arrived Pendie was alone, Peale having been detained by a campaign committee meeting. We had our cocktails in the library. There Pendie told me that she was glad we had an opportunity to chat before her husband arrived because she wanted my advice.

Further talk was cut short by the arrival of Connelly to say that the President was awake, and was asking for Miss Malloy. Would she please go up for a moment?

A few minutes later she came down again. She had told the President I was in the house and he had said he would like to see me. As I accompanied her up the stairs, she halted me on the landing to say: "Instead of talking nonsense, I ought to have warned you to be prepared for a shock. You will find him greatly altered. There's no time now to tell you more, but act as if you did not notice any change and watch every word you speak."

Wonderingly I entered the bedroom. My astonishment was the physical change in the President. He was propped up in bed with pillows. I had expected to find a very sick man, and at first glance his bandaged head, grey lined features and bluish lips suggested this. As I drew nearer, however, I saw that he appeared to be much better than at any time during the last year or two.

His look of strain had gone. The grim lines about his mouth and the hard angularity of his lower jaw had softened. His eyes appeared more blue than ever, but their usual arctic bleakness was replaced by gentleness and humor. They actually twinkled as I shook hands with him.

I murmured some commonplace about his look of so much better. I had barely finished speaking, when an unexpectedly as thunder on a sunny day the President laughed—the great hearty booming laugh we had not heard for nearly four years. I stepped back and it took Pendie's silent finger signal to keep me from betraying my astonishment.

"Heck, my boy," the President said, the laughter still lingering in his voice, "you are the perfect secretary, the quintessence of tactfulness, and you're also the biggest liar, with the exception of Pendie, on my staff. Looking better, am I? I must have been a sight before, then." His laugh boomed out again. "However, at my time of life looks cease to matter. I can still give parties and have fun—with friends like you and Pendie to flatter me."

Still bewildered and uncertain, I smiled and said, "Yes, and I think you'll find Peale Lindsey and even bigger admirer than either Pendie or me."

His face screwed up in a puzzled frown. "Lindsey?" he repeated. "Who's he? Oh, yes, a friend of yours—the publicity man, isn't he? I must get to know him better."

I was about to remind him that Peale was also Pendie's husband, when I caught a look of acute anxiety on her face, from which I gathered that I was to say no more about Peale. Pendie took up trivial conversation, and soon insating that the President must not be excited too long by visitors, signaled me to go.

When Pendie joined me in the library she did what, for her was an unusual thing. She poured her self another cocktail and I noticed that her hand trembled as she raised it to her lips. She looked at me over the rim of the glass and there was a challenge in her voice.

"Well?" she asked defiantly.

"It's beyond me, Pendie. I don't understand a thing, but it's good to see the Major his old self again."

She came over and sat down by me.

"Yes," she said thoughtfully, hide to the greatest of tragedies." "it is good, if it isn't just a pre-"Tragedy?"

"Yes, tragedy, not only for poor old Jud, but for everybody." She paused for a long moment. Her voice had a slow intensity when she continued, "Heck, he doesn't listen any more."

"Listen? What on earth—oh, your old friend Gabriel."

She rested her hand on my arm.

WEALTHY TALES ARE DENIED BY BRILLIANDT

Miss Stallins Describes Engagement Party on Stand

Although Samuel Brilliandt, Belmont hardware dealer, refused to marry her, Miss Anna Stallins of Auburn st., West End, his former fiancee, testified, he refused to permit any other man to have her either and threatened to "put a bullet through him."

With protestations of love for her as "the only woman in the world for me," he failed to marry her, she declared in her $50,000 breach of promise suit in Suffolk Superior Court before Judge Bishop and a jury.

LOVE DID, SHE SAYS

The young woman told of losing weight, suffering loss of appetite, torn by the anguish of "humiliation, shame and hurt" by being jilted by the man she loved, in court stated that now she no longer loved Brilliandt.

"I loved Sam," she testified, "but shortly after April 5, 1931, when he told me he was through with me, that loved died."

Brilliandt pictured by the girl in her court story as a man of considerable wealth for whom his mother sought a rich girl in matrimony, took the stand in defense of the suit and denied any riches.

To the judge and jury he told of receiving only $10 weekly for working in his father's hardware store in Waverley, a picture directly in contrast to the man Miss Stallins described on the stand.

To her, she said, he told of owning one hardware store independently and sharing the profits of three others with his father with whom he was associated.

GRAYED AFTER JILTING

However, in his story, Brilliandt related that at the time of his engagement to Miss Stallins he was receiving $20 weekly, but that times were not so good as they were then.

Mrs. Mary F. Springer, a sister, living in the same house as Miss Stallins, described the engagement party and told of the breaking of the engaged couples to happiness.

In reciting her own story, Miss Stallins, who wept, told of placing a $25 deposit with the sister of a Roxbury hall where the wedding was scheduled for June 17, 1931 and of paying a certain amount of money down on a bedroom set.

"I was so happy, then," she said.

CITY WORKERS FACE NEW CUT

City heads today faced a problem in reducing appropriations to fit the $36,750,000 limit allowed by the legislative committee on municipal finance.

The sum is nearly $4,000,000 less than the limit set for last year, and $7500,000 under the mark asked by Mayor Curley for this year.

A provision is contained in the bill, however, whereby Boston may be authorized to spend additional money for municipal purposes, provided authority is given by the board composed of the attorney-general, state treasurer and the state director of municipal finance.

The legislative allowance was above the mark set by both the Finance Commission and the Municipal Research Bureau, the former being $35,886,000, and the bureau estimate $36,200,000.

Council Postpones Move on Constables

Action on the reappointment of 141 Boston constables for this year has been held up until next Tuesday by the City Councils special committee, which is investigating the records of the applicants.

A number of the applicants are alleged to have overstepped their legal authority in recent months.

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Breakfast Over Station WAAB

"THE WORLD'S BEST dish" MISS Martha Lee says is one of the nice things folks ask about the tender, fruity, brown cookies we made at the Martha Lee Cooking School Wednesday afternoon while all the rest of the world was marathoning a little and looked for Easter duds. THE NEW YOUNG LADY

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"CHESTS UP, MAMSELLES!"

If that trouble-making Dame, Fashion has done very good things for Madames and Misses in the history of Modes and Manners she has just up and done ONE. One that should please a lady and be who loves her both. She has straightened up the feminine figure—made it fashionable and smart and free chic to be straight and healthy-looking. The slouch that endured so long in spite of raves against it, from gyms and editorial desks and studios, is at last in moth-balls, Delphine, and my dear, it is very passe and OUT to stand like a figure 3. If you must look languid, do it standing up straight.

The new young any wears her shoulders back and down not up around her ears, her chest up as though it had a whalebone in under it and her tummy in. It's beautiful I think. Strong, I think, in lieu of the broad rounded expanse that was flesh on the plate after the theater, some-what like a sail in the wind instead of a bark with a spine in it. One is reminded up an imaginary ruler just between the shoulder blades with a jaunty head stuck on it. My—but she's a pretty

You see her now on every street, trying to live up to the decree, a healthy, wholesome, beautiful fashion. From the artist and the sculptor viewpoint—just grand! —NELL BRINKLEY

Carelessness in Speech Looked Upon With Scorn; Use Slang Phrases Sparingly

By Margaret Matson

"LIKE CLOTHES, like travel, like exercise, and like a sense of humor, your speech can keep you young," to quote Mr. Harford Powel. Mr. Powel has an article appearing in one of the current magazines, in which he cautions us to "Talk your age!" It's all right to "skunk a friend" but you mustn't "gyp" him. You can get "all wound up" but not the "jitters." You can "lollygag" around; you may call someone a "blah face" or a "heavy muffin" but if you mention the "boy friend," "sugar daddy," "lamp," "jinx," or "attagirl" you're out of step. Because all these phrases have been succeeded by the new ones. If you want to be smart, you must be alert to new words, new expressions, new corruptions of the King's English, and you must be adept in using them. "To overload one's conversation with such words is boring." To quote again from Mr. Powel, "To use them sparingly is to show you know what is going on." And so it is with slang. In spite of all protests, slang has become an integral part of our life and language.

But bad grammar has not. The same world that smiles at "lousy" is horrified at the omission of an "ly" on an adverb or at the wrong tense of a verb. Isn't that true? How often you've been in a conversation—the usual gossipy sort, you know—and have heard someone being derided because of the way she misuses the language. It isn't always fair, because not everyone has sufficient love for words as words to remember precisely how to use them. And all of us have our pet mistakes. But the modern world dislikes carelessness, and nine times out of ten, bad grammar is nothing more nor less than that. Everyone with average intelligence—at least all English-speaking people—should be able to learn the language and speak it with some degree of precision. It shouldn't require a college education.

The reason that we mention this subject today is because we are interested in everything which will enhance a woman's charm. We talk about cosmetics, clothes, poise, and we repeat again and again how important they are in bringing happiness into our lives. Beauty and charm of speech is another of these essentials. If we want to appear at our best, if we want to climb high in a career, if we want to be popular, we must watch our grammar. We mustn't allow our voices to become harsh; we mustn't be careless in pronunciation. We must learn to express ourselves as charmingly or as colorfully as we dress ourselves. There are fashions in clothes with one essential running all through. That is good grooming. Every season pronounces it the primary factor. There are fashions in speech as well, and the same thing holds true. Cleanliness of diction, carefulness, smoothness—good "oral grooming" come first. After that one may use slang or not as she chooses. If she uses none at all, she's likely to appear a bit prim, and that's as old-fashioned as "twenty-three-skidoo." On the other hand if she uses too much, and without discrimination, even the most callous ears can't help protesting.

Husband's Love Wanders

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young woman thirty years old, and married. I do not live with my husband. He believed in a variety, and I believed in just one. I was always fair and square with him and did everything to make a go of our marriage, but life seemed to be cruel to me from the start. I have been a very good housekeeper and very good cook, and I do long for a home.

Dear Discouraged: At thirty don't harbor the thought that the world has turned its back on you. That was Lee defeat. Now that times are getting better, try for a nice, cheerful job. Make a fresh start and if you keep your courage, you're bound to win out.

Wrist Cysts Prove Harmless, as a General Rule

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

IT IS QUITE common to see individuals who have small tumors or swellings of the wrists. These swellings are round, smooth, slowly growing masses found beneath the skin. Ganglion is one medical term for this condition. Weeping sinew is another.

Dr. Copeland

A ganglion is really a small cyst located within the sheath of a muscle tendon. It is a [illegible] containing a fluid which closely resembles [illegible]. Though most frequently found on the wrist, it is occasionally seen on the foot.

Ganglion is generally a simple and harmless thing, yet cases of a more serious nature are often reported. It may be distressing [illegible] because of interference with the movements of the [illegible] joint.

Most afflicted persons neglect [illegible] and make no effort to rid themselves of the trouble. This is unfortunate, because as I have pointed out, this growth may interfere with the welfare of the individual. Other persons are too zealous in their efforts to get rid of the ailment.

I have in mind the all too common practice of rupturing the ganglion by striking it with a heavy book. There is a superstitious belief that the heavy book should be the family Bible. But no matter what book is used that is not good treatment. It is true that the ganglion may disappear after a severe blow, but I do not recommend this procedure.

Most persons dread the knife. But the best treatment for ganglion is to excise the mass. Modern surgery enables this operation to be performed with a local anesthetic and without any discomfort.

In what I have said I do not mean to imply that all tumors of the wrist or ankle are ganglion [illegible] by the Boston Evening American.

A Delicacy With Grapefruit

IF YOU HAVE NEVER tried Angostura bitters on grapefruit, use a dash or two when next you serve it and you will be surprised at the remarkable improvement in flavor that results . . . in all fine New York hotels, Angostura is regularly served with grapefruit . . .

These bitters, which are world famous, derive their name from the old town of the same name in Venezuela, and the remarkable flavor and stomachic properties of Angostura have been held in high esteem for centuries . . .

Dr. J. G. B. Siegert introduced Angostura to a waiting world; he was a surgeon in the allied army that brought Napoleon to his Waterloo and was later called to Venezuela by Gen. Simon Bolivar, who appointed him surgeon-general at the military hospital at Guayana, located about 250 miles from the mouth of the Orinoco river. He studied the native herbs with zeal and was the first to prepare Angostura, whose value as an aromatic and taste-invigorating flavor was soon appreciated in many lands . . .

Someone told us all this . . . believe it or not!

BOOKS---And a Number of Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

In making around a city as vast as New York, I was struck, the other day by the absence of the old, or rather the young corner loafer.

The disappearance of the saloon may have something to do with this; but mostly it was manors who thus languidly parked themselves in lazy fashion and the raconteurs had no charms for them. Nowadays, roused to the knowledge that an education is something to be desired above rubies, most boys go to night school, if their preliminary training was sadly neglected, but, of course, many of them have simply disappeared into the movie houses.

But there is another thing which keeps them off the streets. These are innumerable boys' clubs all over the city—community houses where they may go, both afternoon and evening, neighborhood settlements which provide them with games, with libraries, gymnasiums, and with vocational activities. Once get a lad into such a place and the streets will hold no lure for him.

* * *

I remember going to such a boys' club over on Second avenue years ago, and hearing a fine production of one of Gilbert and Sullivan's operas, "The Pirates of Penzance." Every part was played by the boys and they sang and acted with unbelievable intelligence and gusto. Yet some of these lads had never until they got into the club seen an open fireplace. They had known only stoves and perhaps crude radiators in their tenement homes, and of course, books, opened, a new world to them. A light opera—it was a dream far beyond them. An occasional vaudeville olio was the best they had ever witnessed in the way of theatrical entertainment. Gilbert's witty lines and matchless lyrics opened their eyes, and a new understanding came to them. It was as if they had suddenly learned a new language.

The Kips Bay Boys' Club on East Fifty-second street is another house of refuge for the lads of today. There, every Spring, they celebrate Open House Week, when they bring their household pets to be judged by a committee, and there are boxing matches, refereed by someone like Gene Tunney or Charley Francis Cox, a swimming pool that couldn't be cleaner and better, a basketball court, ping-pong, roller skating, hockey—everything a boy could desire.

* * *

The dues are infinitesimal—so low sometimes, when a boy's family is very poor, as forty cents a year. But the contribution gives a lad a sense of co-operative ownership, and he proudly pays his own way. He wouldn't have it otherwise.

There are no potential racketeers in such a place. There is no rowdyism, no indecent language. Instead there is healthy competition, and a feeling of well-being, an ambition to get ahead, not only in the games, but in the big game of life.

Jeanette MacDonald Selected by M-G-M for Leading Role in 'The Merry Widow'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Modern Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright 1933 by Universal Service Inc.

Los Angeles, April 21 — As regularly as the spring comes so does the report that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will remake "The Merry Widow." Spring is here and the oft repeated rumor is again on the carpet, but this time there is more semblance of truth to it.

Jeanette MacDonald will sign a contract with M-G-M for the lead in "The Merry Widow." "Married an Angel" and for the musical version of "The Prisoner of Zenda." Maybe the contract is already signed, since Louis B. Mayer retired Irving Thalberg from Algiers, where he is resting to get in touch with Miss MacDonald, who has been on a Louella O. Parsons concert tour and who is making a picture abroad.

Chances are Irving has already signed her and she will be heard singing her songs in M-G-M musicals, numbers.

Chatter in Hollywood:

This has all the earmarks of a first rate romance. Constance Cummings is in Italy as the guest of Benn W. Levy, well known author, and his mother and father. Usually when young men invite young ladies to visit their parents it is serious and it is well known that Mr. Levy has been seeing a great deal of Connie in London and he is said to be one of the most ardent of her long string of admirers. She is coming back to the United States as soon as she finishes her two weeks' holiday in Italy. She has made two pictures abroad but she prefers to do the rest of her picture making in good old Hollywood.

1 Line or Two:

The honeymooners are all returning. Robert Young is back from two weeks spent with his bride in Vancouver. He checked in at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play Marie Dressler's son in "Tugboat Annie." Buster Crabbe and Virginia Reid are billing and cooing up north. Buster returns shortly to be co-featured with Randolph Scott in "Sisters of Sand" which Henry Hathaway will direct. Thelma Todd, who found herself a job in England, leaves this week to make a picture for British International. The good looking husband goes with her. Bret Gibson won't be entirely idle while Sally Eilers is vacationing in England. He will be making a new series of westerns for M. H. Hoffman, Jr. The Gibson-Hoffman unit has engineered for some time. Hoot's first is "The Fighting Parson," by Harry Fraser. An interesting cast of well known pioneers has been lined up to support Hoot, Marcelline Day, Robert Fraser, Ethel Wales and Stanley Blystone.

Connie Would Rest

Constance Bennett's health is the most important thing in her life these days. She gained two or three pounds on her European trip and she would like to lose another seven as soon as she finishes "Bed of Roses." Honolulu is the place she would like.

Arizona Role for Joan

The chances are that "Arizona to Broadway" will be one of Joan Bennett's last pictures for Fox. Her contract with Fox expires very shortly and I am told they have mutually decided to part company. Sally Eilers was to have played opposite Jimmy Dunn in "Arizona to Broadway," but her request for a vacation abroad has made that impossible. Sally leaves Monday for Europe with Rene Dunlap and Ben Lyon. For, meanwhile, she has been angling for the right story for Joan and since the chief role in "Arizona to Broadway" was available it was handed to Joan.

Snapshots of Hollywood:

That PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE she was Club Now Yorking with ROLAND BROWN, director. Isn't that a new one for PEGGY? JOAN BENNETT and GENE MARKEY took BARBARA BENNETT and MORTON DOWNEY stepping at the same place. OSCAR LEVANT and HARPO MARX buying BENITA HUMES dinner in the Vine Street Brown Derby. LILLIAN ROSS and FELIX FEIST, JR., to long things over at the same time. GINGER ROGERS' night celebrated in the Cocoanut Grove. Dolly dressed in her "42d Street" costume decorated the tables. GINGER was there with ROGER MARCHETTI. HERBERT SOMBORN escorting pretty BLONDE LOLA LANE. ERNEST LUBITSCH with DEE TRUDE MICHAEL. JOAN CRAWFORD, invited guest of honor at a party at which she didn't appear. An innocent youth announced he was going a farewell party for JOAN. Perhaps she didn't know him or that she was supposed to come to his party. JOAN BLONDELL with friend husband, ditto UNA MERKEL. CLAIRE WINDSOR in a new creation headed by the town beau, AL HALL. That's all today.

Louella Parsons' column is one of the regular features of the drama section of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Bosworth Back for New Stage Honors

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Vaudeville had the most striking kind of proof yesterday of its power to lure the public. This happens to be the heyday of variety's comeback period, in evidence thereof, folk packed the Bowdoin for the new show. The headline attraction was the magnet, of magnets, Hobart Bosworth, making an in-person appearance. This great veteran of the footlights and films has been a smashing hit over the bigtime circuits, and the triumph is repeated on the current Boston appearance.

Backing the star—though he doesn't happen to need any backing—are five other acts; and the whole bill is roundly received by the audience that occupies every seat and stands solid to the walls with hundreds outside waiting to get in. It is one of the best symptoms of returning prosperity we have yet seen.

Of all the motion picture luminaries stepping into vaudeville, and we have seen them all, Bosworth is the best entertainer. His act is a fairly lengthy one but as an actor is as fine and as expert a showman that the time sparkles with his puncutes and his smiles and his laughs. Humor is an outstanding point and it is all clean and sure-fire. Bosworth acts, talks, gestures perfectly; not a sign or a sound is lost. He has gathered what he has fun, and it all goes over magnificently. Illustrating his act with pictures he tells of his stage appearances here in stardom days on the boards.

Jimmy Downing acts as master of ceremonies for the new bill at the Bowdoin, and contributes songs. His introduction of Bosworth is neatly done. Among the acts on the bills are the Wilson-Aubrey trio, very clever bar workers, who have brand new feats, and Gaby in a burlesque on wrestling that has the house "in stitches", Joe Ceylon, a Chinaman, possessed of a superb singing voice and whose other tricks are diverting. Madeline and Mowbrey, expert rowers, and a fine dance revue.

Abbey Players Give Play of Sacrifices

By HARRIS MORGAN

The deft and delightful Abbey Theater Players brought joy to a large audience at the Hollis last night in "The Whiteheaded Boy," Lennox Robinson's rare comedy of Celtic character, and in the unfailingly delicious curtain-raiser "Spreading the News," by Lady Gregory.

With verve and gusto, the players lived the roles of the members of the Geoghegan family, who succumb to the requirements of the debonaire and heedless young favorite son, Denis, and make sacrifice to his charm and carefree failures their own careers and opportunities for happiness. A sister renounces romance, another sister yields her hope of a job in Dublin, and two brothers toil and slave so that Denis may be educated and served. Rebellion breaks out among the harassed members of the family, but it is a brief one, and Denis triumphs in the end—at their expense.

Eileen Crowe, as the doting mother, gave a performance richly human and delightful. Maureen Delany as the practical-minded Aunt Ellen, proved herself, as always, a comedienne of subtle and rare gifts.

The favorite son himself, the personable Michael J. Dolan, was a refreshing and attractive figure. Matchless comedy was provided by Barry Fitzgerald as the irate neighbor, John Duffy, whose schemes to collect damages for a fancied slight to his pretty daughter are diverted by the mature charms of the equally scheming Aunt Ellen.

U. Wright as the long-suffering elder brother, George, and Denis O Dea, as the irritating and rebellious "Baby," were also particularly effective.

"Spreading the News," that bright little comedy in which a rumor grows in the telling, was made particularly delightful by the characterization work of Michael J. Dolan, Barry Fitzgerald and Maureen Delany.

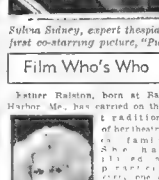
Stage and Screen

The first Boston showings of the talking picture version of Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist" with Dickie Moore in the title role, are featured at Loews Orpheum.

The magician, Huber, featuring his trunk mystery, will herline the new vaudeville bill. Another headline act will be Sammy Lewis and Patty Moore in the tap-dance offering. Among other acts included on the bill are Buster Shaver with Olive and George in "Brief Moments," Clyde Hager, street faker and radio personality; Mike Ames, portrayer of feminine types, and Boyd and Wallin in "Gymnastic Surprises."

Film Who's Who

Esther Ralston, born at Bar Harbor Me., has carried on the traditions of her theatrical family. She has played in several productions of the major studios in Hollywood. After a season in London, she became a stage star. She has also been seen in vaudeville and made records for the phonograph. Her latest picture is "Pick Up," which opens at the Tremont, tomorrow.



Esther Ralston

Vaudeville

RKO Keith's tomorrow has "A Rhapsody in Black and White" as the title of the new vaudeville bill which the house presents for its "vaudeville 11 weeks" while the Keith stars have been selected to participate in this gala occasion. Adelaide Hall, the crooning blackbird, Ralph Cooper and his orchestra, in a symphony of blues and jubilee strains; the three dancing dukes; Neville Fleeson, comedienne, with Helene Denizon and Charlotte Murray, Valentine Vox and Emily Walter, the "King and Queen of Centrimquain," funster and Percival in "Vaudology"; the Four Casting Pearls, "jewels of the air"; Peg Bates, famous dancers, and the feature of "Blackbirds," all go to make up this bill with 30 stage artist.

The Keith-Boston bill also has nine acts, with Sam Jack Kaufman, in his sixth week as music master. In addition to the 6 dancing girls, will be Nelson & Oakland Comedy Act, the Lassiter Brothers, Kay, Katya and Kay, Johnny Lee, and five other acts.

Adelaide Hall

Globe Trotter

With bullets clattering around him, and shells bursting overhead, a Hearst Metrotone News camera man secured thrilling pictures of the final advance of the Japanese army through Jehol to the Great Wall. Soldiers marching across the Lan Ho River and embarking on its frozen surface, the scarcity of food and clothing, the use of the frozen stream as a highway. Then with bombing planes flying overhead, cavalry and artillery open fire in the face of dust storms and 19 degrees below zero cold. The pictures are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's Orpheum. A hopeful spirit pervades the celebration of Easter throughout the country, the most colorful pictures of the singing festival held at sunrise in the Hollywood Bowl at Hollywood, Cal. Enormous crowds are seen on the Atlantic City boardwalk, while the parade on Fifth ave., New York is as picturesque as usual.

Claude G. Bowers, noted author, orator and editorial writer for the Hearst newspapers, gives an exclusive talk to Hearst Metrotone on his appointment by President Roosevelt as ambassador to Spain.

YANKEES TACKLE RED SOX IN FENWAY A. L. OPENER

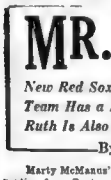
MR. BOSTON

New Red Sox Home Team Has a Punch Ruth Is Also Here

Bout for Indrisano Signs to Meet Smith Ring Game's Future

By JACK CONWAY

Marty McManus' Red Sox are certain to receive a splendid reception from Boston fans. In its games against the Yankees and the Senators, the Sox have displayed amazing improvement over the form they displayed last season.



Mr. Boston

Boston has always been considered an American League town. If the Sox can display a winning punch, they will not lack for support from the public.

It is fitting that Babe Ruth should be here with the Yankees for the Red Sox opening. Ruth is still considered a Boston idol despite the fact he now hits his home runs for New York.

Babe has more color and box office appeal than any other player. His terrific home runs saved baseball following the Black Sox scandal.

Ruth is the perfect ball player. In addition to being the most spectacular hitter in the game, he is a brilliant fielder and base runner. He always does the right thing. He is blessed with baseball instinct.

If the Sox can continue their present pace, the fans will prove that Boston is still the greatest baseball city in the country.

National Boxing Championships Back in Boston

The national amateur boxing championships will return to Boston next week when the A. A. U. stages the title tournament at the Arena on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. For years the national championships were considered a Boston institution. Other cities became jealous of the popularity the sport enjoyed here.

New York finally succeeded in taking the title bouts away from here. A A. U. officials found out last year that New York does not support amateur boxing as well as Boston. It was then voted to give this city the championship contests for this year.

Bill Kenney tells me he has received entries from all parts of the country. In order to eliminate the "joy riders" only boxers who have won sectional championships, or who have been runners-up, will be permitted to compete. This ruling assures the fans of first-class competition.

Amateur boxing has always been popular here. The simon pures have not been educated in the art of stalling. They give the fans real action. This is why amateur boxing is supported by doctors, lawyers, bankers and big business men.

Indrisano and Smith Signed for Bout Bout at Garden

The Boston Garden announces it has signed Johnny Indrisano of East Boston to meet Jimmy Smith of Philadelphia in a ten-round bout on May 5. This match will mark the return of the ring game to the Garden after a long period of inactivity.

Indrisano is one of the best middleweights in the world. Sammy Fuller ranks with the leading lightweights, while Andy Callahan has proved his worth in contests with lightweights, welterweights and middleweights. Then there are Adolph Heuser, Lou Brouillard, Tony Shucco, Jack McCarthy and Dutch Leonard.

Jack Sharkey, like other heavyweight champions, has passed out of the Boston boxing picture for the present. He is under contract to meet Primo Carnera for the New York Garden at the Garden Bowl in Long Island on June 29. Sharkey says his second title defense may be in Boston.

If each of our local ring stars would meet some outstanding opponent on an average of once a month, you would find the boxing game booming here.

Random Shots at the Target

Jumping Joe Savoldi will be making his first appearance as a wrestler in a Boston ring when he clashes with Count Zarynoff at the Garden tonight . . . Lucian Riopel, Montreal wrestling promoter and manager of Henri DeGlane, made a flying visit to this city to see Paul Bowser . . . Riopel says DeGlane will be ready to clash with Ed Don George when he returns to this country in June . . . Riopel is also anxious to match the Frenchman with Savoldi . . . Jack Sharkey, appearing alone, drew a larger crowd than did the Max-Schmeling-Jack Dempsey combination at Montreal . . . The whole world loves a champion . . . Eddie Lewis tells me Wilbe Moore has set over one of his dad's famous chefs for the opening of the Woodcock . . . Dinty's chefs know food . . . Dinty Moore always took personal supervision of the preparation of food for Jack Sharkey, Johnny Dundee and Gene Tunney when they ate at his place in New York on the day of a bout . . . No boxer was ever slipped a "Mickey Finn" when eating at Dinty's.

TRIBE DUELS WITH GIANTS IN N.Y. TODAY

Special to Boston American

New York, April 21 — Manager Bill McKechnie has picked Ben Cantwell, former Giant, to give the Boston Braves their first victory of the season in the second game of their series with the New Yorkers here this afternoon. Will Terry, local pilot, says Herman Bell will try to hand the Warriors their fourth straight setback.

The Braves and Giants received the worst treatment of all major league clubs from the weather this spring, getting in only three of their first 10 scheduled games. And they've shown the effects of this handicap by weak hitting in every start.

GIANTS LEAD LEAGUE

The Giants have scored only five runs in 32 innings, while the Braves have registered but one tally in 28 frames.

The natives have been fortunate however, in that they have won two games and tied one and are leading the National League today with a perfect record. The visitors, on the other hand, are at the bottom of the heap.

The Terrymen will show the Tribesmen no mercy, but it's not in the cards for McKechnie's crew to go much longer without tasting the sweets of victory.

PITCHERS' BATTLE

The opening game of the series was a pitchers' battle the Giants winning, 1 to 0, as Carl "Lefty" Hubbell was fanning 13 Braves and giving but four hits, and Fred Frankhouse was holding the natives to eight scattered bingles.

A triple by Davis and a single by Critz accounted for the only run in the sixth.

The Braves had one chance getting runners on second and third with only one gone. Hubbell pulled himself out of trouble by fanning the next two batters. Larsen on he twice whiffed two batters in order and in the ninth he retired the side via the strike-out route.

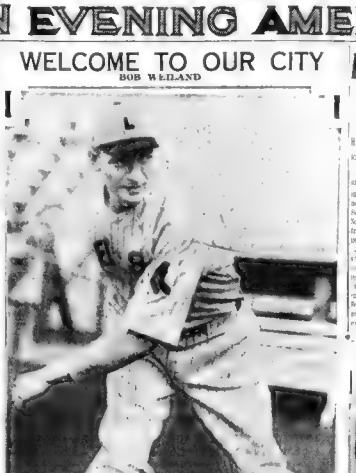
BOB WEILAND



MAYOR JAMES M. CURLEY

Everything's set for the grand opening at Fenway today. The freeswinging Red Sox, the ominous Yanks, and a goodly sprinkling of civic leaders to lend tone to the gathering. There'll be thousands at the Red Sox home—you and you—and you. But don't tell the weatherman. He's harred.

State Supervision Asked for Matmen

The Massachusetts Senate today had gone on record in favor of state supervision and regulation of wrestling.

On a roll-call vote, 22 to 11 the bill to provide for a state boxing and wrestling commission was substituted for an adverse report.

Vermont, because of the number of games it has played and its brilliant victory over Princeton, is favored today. The lineups will have Farmer on the hill

Thursday's Stars

Carl Hubbell, Giants—Fanned 13 and held Braves to four hits for 1 to 0 victory.

Jimmie Foxx and Lefty Grove, Athletics—Foxx hit two homers and Grove, driving in five runs, Grove held Washington to four hits.

Babe Herman, Cubs—Clouted single and double against Cardinals, scoring one run and knocking in two.

Clint Brown, Indians—Held Tigers to four hits and gave only one walk.

"A woman's face is her fortune. But to preserve that fortune you must treat it with care. Let the beauty experts listed daily in the classified columns give you popular weekly lessons."

Layoff Hurts Tribe

The Braves are still feeling the effects of the idleness bad weather forced on them during their home stay. They made only four hits off Hubbell. In 88 innings, they have scored only one run and made but 14 safeties. Frankhouse, Betts and Brandt, in three contests, have allowed just four runs and 18 hits, pitching that would be virtually unhittable if backed up with average hitting.

The rejuvenated Chicago White Sox surge merrily on. They hung up their third straight win and retained second place by coming from behind to nose out the Browns, 5 to 4.

Robert Moses Grove made his second start of the race and the A's hung up their second victory, 8 to 1, at the expense of the Senators, who suffered their third straight defeat. Jimmie Foxx home run king with 38 last season, started his 33 string with a pair of his specialities.

Dizzy Dean Unlucky

Dizzy Dean, unbeatable in Grapefruit League competition, continues to pitch great ball and receive only defeats for this trouble. He held the Cubs to six hits yesterday and was beaten, 3 to 1, by Pat Malone, who also turned in a six-hit effort.

Dale Alexander is still bothered with a charley horse, which he pulled just before the season opened. He was excused from the practice the Sox held at the Fens yesterday, but will be at first base against the Yanks this afternoon.

Diamond Dust

Carl Hubbell, Giants' brilliant southpaw, gave the other major league mound aces a mark to shoot at when he fanned 13 Braves while leading his mates to a 1 to 0 triumph over Fred Frankhouse in New York's National League inaugural.

It marked the Giants' third game and Hubbell's third appearance on the hill "Lefty" is referred to as half Bill Terry's mound staff. It would seem that he were the entire brigade.

Hall, Aces' Net Jinx, Plays Mangin Today

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 21 (AP) — J. Gilbert Hall is ranked only 14th nationally but he is developing into a source of annoyance to higher ranked stars.

A week after he had beaten the sixth ranking player, Lester Bloefax, in the fourth and fourth tournament at Pinehurst, Hall eliminated Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York, No. 4 ranking star, in the quarter-finals of the Mason and Dixon tournament here yesterday.

Joining him in the semi-finals was Frank Shields and Gregory Mangin was Clifford Sutter, recently named to the United States Davis Cup team, gained a bye in the fourth round when Berkeley Bell, Shields and Mangin had won their quarterfinal matches Wednesday.

Hall, who has played against Sutter against Shields and Hall against Mangin.

The women's singles final, also slated for today, found Mrs. John Van Lynn opposing the Baroness Maud Levi.

Women Gym Groups Stage Open Night

The women's classes of the Curtis Hall Gym held an open night on Monday at 8 o'clock. All women interested are invited to attend.

VERMONT NINE PLAYS EAGLES

The Boston College baseball team will go through the final practice today before facing Vermont University for the first game of the season at University Heights tomorrow.

Red Rey will open the game for the Eagles on the mound with George McLaughlin ready to finish. Duke McIntyre will catch.

Dave Concannon of Dorchester will be given a chance at shortstop. Concannon was the big gun of the hard-hitting Falmouth Club last summer, and should be able to do well with the Eagles.

WEILAND HOSE HILL CHOICE AGAINST RUFFING

will be witnessed for the first time this p. m.

RUFFING, WEILAND HURL

Quite a game should also be witnessed, judged from the mound selections.

Bob Weiland elevated against the Yankees for the Sox, and Charley Ruffing, long a Fenwayite but now in the Yanks' right pocket and American League ranks, will do the enemy's heaving.

The pre-stages a duel in New York that says that the boys are going to find Ruff was at his speediest with a nine-hit, 6-0 win over the Sox, just as fast with a perfect count of the mound, for a man.

Both gave only five hits in nine full innings and they would probably have been fighting it out until darkness interfered, if Ruffing hadn't stepped up with two out and three on, and the score tied in the ninth to hit a home run.

SOX FIGHT AND HUSTLE

The struggle should be well worth watching. Every game the Sox have played to date has been a fighting, hustling one from start to finish and word has gone out all over the circuit that the Fenways, even if no longer the dazzlers they were in the seven other years when they were stepping all over and kicking around ever since 1920, are no club in either circuit has had better pitching or has displayed more fight and hustle than the Sox thus far. The McManusmen have come in their share of timely hits, too.

Marty McManus has pointed the best nine. He started Andrews, Johnson, Rhodes and Weiland, his best bets, in order, and he has yet to make a mistake in picking his relief fingers or hitters. As far as seeking pinch-hitters correctly is concerned, though, he insists that Umpire Tommy Daly, his new batter, coach he gives some of the credit for that.

Marty is satisfied that his infield, composed of Alexander at first, Hodapp at second, Warstler at short and himself at third is the strongest he can field but he is still experimenting with his outfield.

OUTFIELD SHIFTED

Roy Johnson and Johnny Watwood have been in the garden in every game to date, but service in the third outpost has been divided among Smead Jolley, Bob Fothergill, Tom Winsett and George Stumpf.

The Yanks lineup exactly as they did in the World Series last fall with Gehrig, Lazzeri, Sewell and Cossetti in the infield, Ruth, Combs and Chapman in the outfield and Bill Dickey catching.

The only new champions are Fred Walker, outfielder, and Don Heinzan, pitcher, both Newark farm products. The Yanks haven't started to hit at their normal gait, or they remain undefeated. It's going to be next to impossible to stop them when they start firing their big guns.

Because of the number of invited guests and reservations for the Yankee-Sox duel this P. M., the Ladies' Day privilege will not become effective until next week.

YALE BLANKED BY RAM NINE

New Haven, Ct., April 21 (AP)—A first inning, in which seven men walked across the plate on four bases on balls, and three others scored on a triple enabled the Fordham nine to defeat Yale here, 11 to 0.

Eastwaick of Fordham pitched air tight ball for the visitors.

Harrington, starting for Yale, was kd in five runs. Two more walked across the plate after a. Y. Rogers relieved him, with the bases full. Tony Saranello's triple accounted for three more.

Bill Cook to Stay on Ranger Roster

Saskatoon, Sask., April 21 (AP)—Despite his 38 years, Bill Cook, veteran wing of the New York Rangers is far from through with hockey, his brother Hank denied published reports that he planned to retire from the game. He said he would be back with the Rangers next November

Carl Hubbell Sets Mark for Openers. Victor Three Times In Three Cities.

By BILL CORUM

New York, April 21 (AP)
Mr. Jack White
Tan Ha-Ha Club
New York City

Dear Jack—I suppose you will be going around now with your chest stuck out remarking to perfect strangers, "Didn't I tell you that fellow Hubbell was a great pitcher?"

Well, I want to know how good you think that Hubbell can pitch. Can he push a ball by Lefty Gomez?

Be careful what you say, because you know what the fans are, and all of us have to go to the National League and Georgie Gone is the Moseller pay you 25 a week anyhow?

REAL GIANTS FAN

Of course I know, Jack, that you are one of those real old Giant fans.

I know that you have read ahead, waived Bob Ripley to one side, and gone straight to Carl Hubbell, hero of the first game, pitcher of three victories in major leagues to pitch in three consecutive opening games in three different cities without a defeat these last two big teams have won 21 consecutive games.

There is a record that nobody ever will be tied, much less passed, and I say that with full realization that "never" is a long, long word.

But all that is beside the point, as Durante would say.

To be honest, I'm just a wow-wow of a National League fan myself. I would take either the Giants or Yanks and be just tied up since you are strictly a Giant and have never been on the other side of the Harlem, except to bring back a lost ball. I'll say here now that Lefty Gomez is a better pitcher than Carl Hubbell.

What have you got to say about that?

Sincerely yours,
P. S. Now that the Giants are worth only $1 cents, it ought to be easy to sign a tab around the place, eh?

Just in case some of you fans may not know this fellow Hubbell, who is cutting such a wide swath in the National League he is a lean, lanky, rocking horse quality lefthander from down Oklahoma way.

HUBBELL BAD FOR BRAVES

He was born in Carthage, Mo., but as a youth was transplanted to Meeker, Okla., to grow up with the Indians. That's why the Braves are always so easy for him. He knows all about Indians and cooks 'em up heap bad medicine.

Ever since he joined the Giants late in the season four years ago Hubbell has been a great pitcher.

There is no question in my mind but that Hubbell is the best southpaw we have seen in a Giant uniform since Lil Arthur Nehf went away from here.

Indeed Hubbell is so good that if he could pitch every day the Giants might stay right up there where they are in the pennant race. But he can't pitch every day. And when all those double-header starts coming along . . . well, to be plain spoken, it is an admission of weakness that Terry is working him in every game, isn't it?

By JACK CONWAY

There's a big ton of cash in the Garden coffers as the result of tonight's wrestling card.

Ed Don George and Rolland Kirschmeyer go to the post in the first of three falls affair.

Count Zarynoff, who has been recognized as champion in most states as the result of a recent ruling by Jim Londos at Chicago, will defend his title against Joe Savoldi in another one of those three-out-of-five affairs.

TWO FINISH BOUTS

Each of these, be it known, is a finish affair. The George-Kirschmeyer match will be decided by best two falls out of three, as the Count Zarynoff match will be decided by one fall.

There is considerable interest in the appearance here of Savoldi. The former fullback gained fame as a fighting member of Notre Dame. He was a big favorite when he went to the wars, two years ago. He has still a great following in the prize game. He reached his peak at Chicago two weeks ago tonight, when he scored a winning fall over Jim Londos.

JOE HAS TITLE CLAIM

The bout had been arranged as far back as last fall, so it would not, of course, be Londos' fault if Savoldi had not been matched to the championship.

Zarynoff is expected to give the fleeced Savoldi a rapid fire workout, as he tells it he must be ready for Jim Londos, who is due to [illegible] Garden [illegible] Zarynoff [illegible] Savoldi. He says [illegible] he will [illegible] the biggest attraction that could be staged here at [illegible]

Coin Rolls for Don

Jack Conway's famous magic coin today named Ed Don George to win over Rolland Kirschmeyer and dumbling Joe Savoldi to defeat Count Zarynoff at the Garden tonight. The coin's 1933 record:

HOD OF BRICKS OR MAT RIVAL, IT'S 'UP, FOR NOTRE DAME!

Here we have pictorially, the sports career of Jumping Joe Savoldi, who meets Count Zarynoff in the Paul Bowser show at the Garden tonight. Joe played center on the basketball team, fullback on the football team at Notre Dame. He was a great carrier with a hod of bricks, too. And the guy is a champion of someplace, if we remember rightly.

SAVOLDI PINS SAMMY STEIN

Toledo, April 21 (AP)—Jumping Joe Savoldi, latest candidate for heavyweight wrestling championship, left no doubt as to his aspirations here tonight when he pinned Sammy Stein, New York, to the mat.

The first fall came in 19 minutes and 45 seconds, after the former Notre Dame gridiron star showed a decided edge over his opponent. Just four minutes and 30 seconds elapsed after the referee ordered when Savoldi again pinned Stein to the mat.

W. G. A. VETERANS STAR

TEAM BERTHS FOR SEASONED PERFORMERS

By BILL GRIMES

Judging from the results of the two Women's Golf Association medal play tournaments, the four districts will be represented by veteran first teams, for Miss Jane Broadwell, Longmeadow is the only newcomer likely to break into any of the varsity lineups.

According to the by-laws of the association, the teams must be selected on the basis of the showing in the medal play tournaments and the average of two of the three-stroke competition rounds will determine the placing of the players.

The wording is somewhat vague as to the selection of players, no exceptions to the rule may be made.

STARS HIT STRIDE

After the opening tournament last Monday, there were grounds for the prediction that Miss Rosamond Valley, captain of the Northern District and Miss Grace English, might not qualify for the first team.

Miss Valley had a best selected 15 holes of 92 at Wollaston while Miss English was only one stroke lower.

However, Miss Valley and Miss English hit their strides in the Thursday play, the former posting a 75, after eliminating her three poorest holes, while Miss English turned in a 15-hole total of 70.

Miss Margaret Curtis, Essex County, a former national champion, has as usual been the most consistent of the Northern District players. Unquestionably, she will qualify to be the No. 1 player for the Northern District.

Mrs. Henri F. Pruneau, Jr., Charles River, with her 68 at Albemarle, and a 75 yesterday at Pine Brook Valley, tops the Eastern District contenders by a one-stroke margin over Miss Ruth Batchelder, Brae Burn, while Mrs. F. Reed Estabrook, The Country Club, is in third place with 149.

Miss Ruth Batchelder of Eastern is concerned regarding Miss Dorothy Hunter, Albemarle, former girl champion of the state. In the first tournament, Miss Hunter carded a 92 for 18 holes, though her best selected 15 totaled 70. At Pine Brook Valley, Miss Hunter used up a total of 106 strokes.

MISS VERRY CAPABLE

Miss Deborah Verry, Kittansett, has an average of 73 for two tournaments. Although she will receive plenty of competition from Mrs. C. F. Eaton, Jr., and Mrs. W. G. Doe, both of Wellesley, Miss Verry is favored to win the honors both of her district team.

In the Middle District, the fight for first place is a three-cornered affair, between Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., Sue Hollebone, Miss Dorothy Richards and Miss Martha Brewer.

If Miss Curtis, Miss Verry, Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Pruneau finish in their respective districts, it will insure some worthwhile matches during the coming match play competition for the W. G. A. championship.

Harvard Lacrosse Team Meets Brown

The Harvard varsity lacrosse team will play Brown University at the Business School Field, North Harvard st., tomorrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock. Victorious in its two home games this season, the Crimson is in hopes of stretching its string another point.

In its last two games Harvard has defeated M. I. T. 10 to 0, and the Boston Lacrosse Club 8 to 3, after losing to St. John's and tieing Navy on its spring trip.

The junior varsity team will open its season as soon as the varsity game is finished. The jayvees will be opposed by Andover.

The Doctor deserves to be paid promptly. If you're in need of money to pay emergency bills turn to the "Money to Loan" classification in today's Want Ads.

TAP'S TIPS

Wildcat Trackmen Tilt With Huskies

Northeastern will send a strong track team to New Hampshire tomorrow afternoon to open its season against the Wildcats. Coaches Joe Zelley and Ed Parsons will take along 36 athletes.

Capt. Elmer MacKenzie, N. E. 45 meters hurdles champion, is entered in both hurdle races, and also hopes to pick up points in the dashes.

Zaharias Pins Raines

Washington, April 21 (AP)—George Zaharias, threw Dick Raines, with a body slam in a 22-minute wrestling headliner here.

Everett Marshall, took a fall from Tom Alley, in 24½ minutes.

"300" RECORD FALLS IN TANK TITLE MEET

Buffalo, N. Y., April 21 (AP)—A world's record was smashed, a reigning champion dethroned, and a new individual champion crowned in the second night of the Women's National A. A. U. swimming championship meet here.

Katherine Rawls, 15-year-old Fort Lauderdale, Fla., star, who Wednesday smashed the world 300-yard medley record, defeated Miss Dorothy Poynton, the defending low-board diving champion, to take the title in that event.

Miss Leonore Kight, of Homestead, Pa., smashed the world 300-yard free-style mark in a special race. Miss Margaret Hoffman of Scranton, Pa., won the 100-yard breast stroke title after a nip-and-tuck battle with Miss Rawls.

Miss Rawls' performance in the diving was by far the high spot of the meet to date.

In the special 300-yard free style Miss Kight raced against the old record of 3:39, set in 1930, by Helene Madison, and was clocked by four judges in 3:38.2.

Pfirman Umpires 1700th Tilt in Row

New York, April 21 (AP)—If baseball "endurance records" interest you, consider the claims of Charley Pfirman, National League umpire.

Charley umpired his 1700th consecutive big leage ball game at the Polo Grounds yesterday. Since he came up from the Southern League in 1922, Pfirman hasn't missed a single day's work. He's been calling them as he saw them for 24 years.

EX-CYCLE ACE TRAINER FOR GARDEN RACE

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Eddie Rool, star of many six-day bike races in days that have gone by, is the Boston Garden watching for the dizzy grind to start there on Sunday, soon after midnight.

Eddie hasn't his bike with him. Instead he's got a room full of bandages, liniments, spirits, sunray lamps and all other paraphernalia for he's now chief trainer and presides over the first-aid and casualty department.

ROOOT BORN IN MELROSE

Root was born and raised in Melrose. With Freddy Hill, Jimmy Moran, Pat Logan, Eddie McDuffy, Major Taylor, Alex McLean, Nat and Tom Butler, Eddie carried the name of Boston to glory all over the world where cycling was a sport.

After quitting active racing Root continued as a motorcycle pace-maker. Then he entered the training end of the game and is now regarded as one of the best conditioners of bike racers.

And it's interesting to talk with him for he'll tell you about the start of six-day riding when one rider did it all alone. Then came a law making it a two-man team affair. He remembers when the riders used the high wheel and then shifted to the safety bike when its greater speed was proven.

RACE ENTHUSES EDDIE

Root is just as enthusiastic over the coming six-day whirl at the Garden as he was when he was riding in the gay and glamorous '90's. He thinks the Garden race has everything.

The entrants are arriving in flocks at the North and South Stations for the grind and a classy field will be ready to roll off the mark on Sunday night.

"GABRIEL OVER THE WHITE HOUSE"

"Don't laugh at me, Beek," she said tremulously, "or I'll cry."

According to Pendie, the President had never recovered from the accident of four years ago. Some pressure or lesion had affected his brain, and had been removed only by this second injury.

During the last four fateful years he had not been normal. His changed character, temperament and habits all indicated this. The great acts of statesmanship for which he was responsible at home and abroad were the direct outcome of that madness so close to genius, not conscious acts of sane deliberation and judgment on his part. Now he was restored to his normal self so far as his mentality was concerned and the last years were to him only a dim and confused nightmare.

His mind visualized a state of affairs both political and domestic as they had been when he was first elected President. He did not realize that Pendie was married, that Jim, his nephew, was now over seven years old, that a presidential election was at hand, or that he had become one of the great figures of all time.

The public was quick to sense that something was wrong. The Washington correspondents were restrained from sensation mongering only by tactful and sympathetic handling by Lindsey.

CABINET WONDERS

Hammond's meeting with his Cabinet was not unlike that of four years earlier when the President faced his old Cabinet for the first time after the automobile smash.

Now, as then, he made curt acknowledgements of their congratulations on his escape and recovery. Again he sat silent for a while studying their faces as if see. Contrary to his practice, the President stood to address his Cabinet.

Whatever the opinion of Hammond's accuracy in the past, something inherently fine predominated in that tragic valediction.

A passing reference to his illness and the many honors showered on it, a careful study of the political developments of the last few years, and then:

"For many of the changes, it seems, I must accept some measure of responsibility."

His hearers smiled at this.

"Some measure of responsibility?" The next sentence erased their smiles.

"Much that has been done commands my cordial approval, but there are matters, particularly those germane to the Constitution and our relations with foreign powers, which excite profound doubt in my mind, and in some instances unqualified disapproval."

STUPEFACTION

Stupefaction seemed to overcome the Cabinet as it listened to an unequivocal condemnation of various ordinances, all initiated by this man, the successful consummation of which had carried him the plaudits of the world.

By now the President was tiring. He swayed a little on his feet, and in his ashen face the bluish tinge of his lips became more noticeable. He sipped some water and then asked them to forgive him if he sat awhile continuing his remarks.

Sympathy for the broken giant was mingled with relief. Disaster might still be averted. Garside would get the nomination and the great reanisance would be carried on to its triumphantful finish! . . . But the President was speaking again.

"Gentlemen, before I close this meeting I have one more word to say. There will be another meeting tomorrow at 11 and at that time I propose to lay before you the terms of a television speech I feel it my duty to deliver. The Secretary of Education will please make the necessary arrangements."

Every heart seemed to stop beating. Garside jumped to his feet, but could speak. Hammond went on:

"Until that speech has been made it is important that gentlemen not to disclose to anyone what has occurred at this meeting."

His voice reflected the unutterable weariness of body and mind. Each word was uttered more slowly, with painful pauses between the short sentences. "I shall be refreshed . . . and such a speech, such a call upon my strength is unnecessary . . . but at whatever cost to me physically or politically . . . I must face the dictates of my conscience . . . of my honor as a citizen . . . I owe to those who elected me . . . entrusted me with my high responsibility . . . a humble apology." His voice sank to a whisper, and his head sank lower. "I have failed to keep the faith . . . unwittingly, and by the heavy hand of affliction . . . but none the less I have violated my oath . . . I . . . have . . . betrayed . . . the people."

With Dr. Eastman's aid I got the President over to the White House and up to his room, where Connelly and I helped him undress and put him into bed. Then his overtaxed heart again failed. It was not a serious attack, and a few inhalations of amyl-nitrous gave quickly restored him. Soon he was sleeping peacefully, normally and without an opiate.

I went to find Peale, but he had hurried off to a conference with Garside and other leading members of the administration.

BRITISH PREMIER ON AIR

Washington Address Being Broadcast

Ramsay MacDonald to Talk on Nationwide Network Waves Tomorrow Afternoon

N. F. T.

Now the spotlight turns to gold standard discussions. Since monetary matters so vitally concern nations of the world, it is logical to swing radio dials toward a scheduled speech by Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain. He will address tuned in America from Washington tomorrow afternoon, to be heard hereabouts (WBZ-WBZA and WAAB) between 2 o'clock and 2:30.

* * *

This special feature has been made available to the NBC and CBS networks by the National Press Club. Peter Brandt, president of that noted newspaper institution, will introduce the distinguished visitor from England.

* * *

Offerings such as the above, coming across during the mid-afternoon of a fast moving work day, tend to make a fellow glad he has a unique and efficient little desk speaker at hand to capture the proceedings from start to finish. Here where the daily "collumn" takes shape, one has found an attractive midget model "Radiolette" receiver, measuring 6¼ inches high, 8 and a fraction inches long and only 4½ inches deep. It weighs but six pounds, can be hooked in on either DC or AC current. What's more, it performs in truly scientific fashion. Some standby, no mistake!

RAMBINO BROADCASTING

Another all star array of outstanding news characters is due on dials tonight when the weekly Sunday Advertiser Speaker" airing again takes its turn (WNAC) at 8:30—presenting Babe Ruth, baseball colossus of clout fame, and Bledsoe the celebrated big brown skinned buritone of "Old Man River" fame. Listeners will likewise welcome a clear and practical outline of what going off the Gold Standard means to the average person. Hear the subject interpreted by Mr. P. A. O'Connell, prominent Boston retail store head, business man and modern merchandising authority of far-flung international reputation.

LOCAL LATHER

Station WRDH is acquiring an ever increasing loudspeaker patronage in these parts it seems, if current mail comment indicates. Methinks "The Gossipers" going over to that "mike" outfit has helped substantially . . . . Friends "Freddy" Rosenthal looms as the latest Hub lady to be on the broadcast climb in local radio ranks, opening today behind Metropolitan Theater footlights to fill a spot-light week's engagement in conjunction with the screen production "Cavalcade" as heralded there. This young miss of fond gal, with her striking concert soprano voice, might really be considered a WRDH girl-friend, as though her talents were acknowledged long before the broadcasting programs, her tenor to be heard regularly beginning Monday evening next (WEEI) at 7:15 . . . Nightly sighning off time over WAAB waves is set for 11 o'clock hence forth . . . An alert bystander during the Marathon course out Framingham way, says scarcely one among ten people in the crowds recognized Graham McNamee sitting there atop the "Sound Truck" broadcasting vehicle bore New York license plates and was otherwise quite showy . . . However, our observing and obliging friend also says he did hear one chap remark to a companion: "Hey, Joe, look! There's a man broadcasting!"

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

A story told with much circumstance of detail came to Sheriff Jim Bassett Sunday afternoon, directed against H. R. Arbuckle, who was registered at the Commercial Hotel. The story recited that Mr. Arbuckle was a high-powered liquor runner and that he had already made arrangements to supply a number of local "dealers."

The sheriff and nightwatch Dick Staatz took the stranger into custody, gave him and his car and even his room a careful once-over, but there was no evidence of any liquor. Arbuckle said he was selling a preparation for cleaning windshields.

Poor reformers! What a spot
They are in now. They were hot
Stuff back in the bygone days

Of a future fit for men
Such as we. All of which seems funny.

Legislatures, now, want money
Much more than a reformation
Taking in the entire nation.
Though our guardians may fuss
About vice, innocuous,

They are very apt to judge it
If it helps fix up the budget.
Virtue is its own reward;
So we really can't afford
It just now. Down to brass tacks, it
Seems quite clear you cannot tax it.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

Uniform Labor Laws

Conference Is Coming

Senator Parkman and Representative Herter have proposed a conference of all the New England States in the hope they may agree upon a policy of uniform labor laws.

Presumably this is in harmony with the program which Governor Ely has sought to establish on a national basis and should have his approval. It should have his approval, anyway, and the blessing of the Legislature, to which Messrs. Parkman and Herter have presented their petition.

The New England manufacturers, particularly in the textile field, have told us repeatedly they are handicapped by our progressive and humane laws as contrasted with the "slave" conditions that exist in the Southern States.

It is a natural assumption, therefore, that they handicap each other by the disparities among the laws of our individual New England States.

New England possesses a wealth and an industrial output greatly in excess of our relative population to the Nation as a whole.

In any event, the rest of the country looks to New England as the great industrial center of the Nation.

Once we adopt a uniform program of labor laws ourselves, we would be stronger in presenting our claims to the Nation of the necessity of installing a national policy based upon New England standards.

Judges and Salaries

$2100 from $14,000

The justices of the Massachusetts Supreme Court have voluntarily cut their own salaries fifteen per cent.

By their own act they place themselves in harmony with the wage cut imposed upon State officials and employes by the Legislature.

The judges are paid $14,000 per year. They retire on pensions. Their tenure is secure. Presumably the Constitution protects them from the vagaries of salary reductions in the interest of economy.

There are men out of work who will say that a reduction of $2100 out of a salary of $14,000 per year is no great sacrifice. But it is. The good judge, who will dispense justice with an even hand, is worth all the money that society can pay him. He should have financial security in order that his judgments should not be influenced by any private interest.

It is true, however, that the real hardship of all this wage slashing is borne by the humble employes of the State. When the State cuts the wage of a laborer or mechanic at $4 per day, the State is cutting into the food on his table and the clothing of his children.

Mr. Pelley's Salary

Stockholders Entitled to Know

Whatever may have been his intention in the matter, Chairman Buckland reverted to the old "public be damned" policy by his refusal to state the salary of President Pelley to the New Haven Railroad stockholders.

President Pelley is understood to be paid about $90,000 a year. He may be worth it to the New Haven; he may be worth double that amount.

No matter how high or how low his salary may be, the stockholders should know it. They own the railroad. They have the right to be informed of the receipts and expenditures of their property.

Surely it is a time for frank and free discussion when the railroads are appealing to the Treasury of the United States, which is the people's treasury, for financial assistance and relief.

2-Cent Stamp

Postmaster-General Farley has indicated his intention to restore the two-cent stamp.

Mr. Farley is a practical man and he has been influenced to this decision no doubt by the character of argument which has been stated by this newspaper.

The three-cent stamp is an economic failure.

Our large business houses, which have a heavy volume of mail, have found it cheaper to employ their own carriers to distribute their letters.

The high cost of postage has fallen upon the poorer people.

The third result has been, of course, an increased deficit for the postal department.

The two-cent stamp ought to be restored as the price for the delivery of letters in local districts at least.

Gasoline Bootlegging

Bootlegging of gasoline has come to be a serious problem.

The national government collects about $500,000,000 a year from the penny gas tax.

And it is estimated to lose $100,000,000 a year from the non-payment of the tax on gasoline illicitly sold.

Gasoline is supposed to pay the tax in the State where it is consumed.

Buy it in Massachusetts, transport it to Rhode Island, dump it into the retail tank of the roadside station and it escapes the tax.

The bootlegger and the shady retailer split the profit, which is the tax evaded.

Banking Clouds Lifting

The Central Trust Company in Cambridge is to be reopened. And the Lawrence Trust Company at Lawrence.

Surely these are fine and encouraging signs.

The Central, for example, had 23,000 depositors, whose savings of $8,500,000 had been isolated from them nearly a year.

Now the clouds lift. This little army of depositors are to have recourse to their savings. They and the people of Cambridge are to have again the financial convenience and services and credit of a going bank which emerges successfully through the clouds of depression.

These are the developments which give the people of America and particularly of New England their new-found optimism.

NEW YORK, April 21—Thoughts while strolling: Lucius Boomer's name suggests biting into an exploding marshmallow. And Fritzi Scheff's closing of a roll top desk. Even while laughing at Fred Allen's grand sense of humor I want to file his voice. Andy, of Amos 'n' Andy, and Vincent Lopez have identical profiles.

Lots of striped suits. One of my favorite people — Frank Crowninshield. Julia Sanderson never giggles that way away from the microphone. Whatever became of Gerald Stanley Lee? Nobody has grown so rich and famous on abuse as Rudy Vallee. Hy Mayer's tweeds and loose collar.

Matthew Carney, a Paducah, Ky., boy, who made good in the city. Fred Detwiller, the painter. Arthur Hopkins always makes me think of Mr. Hobbs, the grocer in Fauntleroy. Overheard: "I've backslid until I'm shiny." Jerome Beatty and Brock Pemberton bear a resemblance. Both Kansans, too.

Rita Weiman took advantage of a convalescent tedium at Atlantic City to turn out her first full-length novel. She has written short stories for 15 years. Also plays, but this was the only long volume. Her great fear, like most fears, proved an illusion. She thought a novel too complicated, but found it easier than a short.

America's speediest fiction writers are Arthur Somers Roche and Courtney Ryley Cooper. In leaner days Cooper often turned out three serials a week. Now he works leisurely. So fast did he write pot boilers in his attic days around Gramercy he tipped his fore-fingers, being a two fingered typist, with collodion and bound them in adhesive tape. Otherwise in a few hours they would be raw and bleeding.

* * *

Few writers achieve the art of dictation. Dictated material, as a rule, hasn't the swing that comes with bumping oneself over a typewriter. Roche is the only scribbler I know who mastered it. Once acquired it reduces work to a minimum and is the reason for Roche having so much leisure for Palm Beach, high-ho!

I've always thought the most attractive name among the feminine writers was Kathleen Norris with Faith Baldwin a close second. Jerome K. Jerome—pronounced in the English fashion Jerum Kay Jerum—strikes me as the most satisfactory name among the humorists. Although Irvin Cobb, due to the perversity of fate, just missed having the best fitting name of all for a humorist. His father wanted to call him Josh Cobb, and the family agreed, but a romantic aunt came into the picture all agurgle over Irvin Shrewsbury. And thus he was named.

* * *

Cobb's precocious granddaughter Pat calls him Ivy and he's the apple of her eye. The other night he was doing imitations, one of an alligator in which the famous Cobb mouth jutted and opened into a ferocious cavern. Pat's slumberous eyes took on a startled look and patting his cheek she lisped: "No more imitations, just be Ivy."

I was thinking today—after seeing Howard L. Acton in knickers—of the time I appeared among nestors in front of my father's hotel, fresh from the city, wearing a Norfolk jacket. As I stepped from the depot hack there was a sudden freeze and walking through the Arctic Circle one die-hard muttered: "A stench on the landscape!"

This same knotty old Yankee was in his garden one morning when the town's religious zealot, passing on horse-back, called: "Brother, have you made your peace with God?" He didn't hear and inquired: "What say?" The question was repeated and, resting on his hoe, he drawled: "We ain't come to no open break yit!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Big Hearted?

SEZ YOU: "Does it pay to be big-hearted?"

"Does it pay to consider the other fellow's side of the question when things are in a jam?"

Elsie Robinson

Sez I: "Yes, I think it does."

Sez you: "But if he won't think of your side of the question, what then?"

Sez I: "That's exasperating—but I still think it pay: to be big-hearted."

Sez you. "But suppose you know he's being unfair?"

Sez I: "That's his bad luck."

Sez you: "But maybe he won't stop with just being unfair. Maybe he'll misrepresent you—say you're big-hearted because you're in the wrong and are, secretly, trying to buy him off. What then? Have you ever had anything like that happen to you?"

Sez I: "Yes, I have, many times. Most times, in fact. Rarely have I ever tried being big-hearted without getting it in the neck, pronto and plenty!"

Sez you: "And yet you still insist that big-heartedness pays?"

Sez I: "Yes, I still insist."

Sez you: "Then you're cuckoo!"

Sez I: "No, I'm not. I'm smart. And, if you'll listen a moment, you'll see I'm smart. But let's get things clear first.

"I don't, for a second, believe that big-heartedness 'pays' in the same sense you mean.

"I don't believe it will make me popular; win friends for me. To the contrary, by being big-hearted I've lost far more friends, than I've ever gained. My most bitter enemies are those whom I've tried hardest to help; and those who didn't actually hate me for it, despised me—said I was a fool.

"Nor has being big-hearted made life easier for me. Instead, it has made life much harder. I've wasted money; missed out on a lot of fun, and been 'put on the spot' many and many a time.

"Yet, I still maintain, it pays to be big-hearted!

"For this is the way I look at it. I'm not very shrewd. I'm not beautiful, nor 'the life of the party,' nor very young any more.

"And, to make things worse, I've done some mighty mean things and pulled some awful boners. I've lied. I've hurt and failed people I loved. And I've been downright lazy and cussed.

"Not a very pretty record? You bet it isn't! Yet that's how my record stands after 50 years of the gorgeous opportunity of life. I certainly feel low when I think about it. I certainly would have liked to make good in a big way. It would have been grand to have been a genius. I would even have liked to have been a saint, though, I must admit, most saints give me the jitters. But still—it would have been nice to look back on life and think of the swell things I'd done.

"But I can't. It's too late now. It's a cinch they'll have to plant me minus medals. But there's just one thing I can do that will make me feel they didn't waste all the dog biscuits—

"I CAN BE BIG-HEARTED.

"Not that I often am. Usually I'm as ornery as they come; but once in a blue moon I do manage to act civilized. And then, for a few minutes, I remember what a flop and a meanie I am myself—and forgive the other fellow accordingly.

"Goofy? Maye. We all have our queer streaks. Some people like white rats. Others eat snails. My idea of a swell time is playing that I'm bigger than I am, and if it wastes my money—why, that's my bad luck.

"But, whatever you may think about it, I think it pays to be big-hearted. I may lose friends by it—and get a general reputation for being a nut. But—

"IT'S THE ONE THING I CAN DO THAT RATES."

Just Folks

Something to Do

Not long ago I knew a man whose path was smooth and fair.
He'd all he wished of money and he'd not a single care,
But he used to come to see me and he'd mutter many a night:
"I'm tired of being idle and I'd like a foe to fight.

"I'm tired of golf and yachting and I'm sick of traveling, too.
I think I could be happy if I had a job to do.
I'd like to rise o' mornings with some doubts to solve or dread.
You may think retirement's pleasant, but I'd rather work instead.

"For the fun is in the striving and the thrill is in the chase
And it keeps man healthy-minded if he has some odds to face.
It is good to start a business and to think and plan for it;
It is fine to be successful, but it's deadly when you quit!"

Well, we're back once more in harness and we've doubts and fears to face.
There are problems now a-plenty, but it's healthy for the race.
Now we're battling for existence and we're toiling in the sun
And as long as we'll keep busy boredom cannot spoil our fun.

Which Is the REAL One?

One Look, and You KNOW

HITLER, THE IMITATION BROADCAST

We return to the interesting Mr. Hitler, who believes that he can help Germany by driving out some of its greatest scientists, artists, industrialists and teachers because they happen to be as the learned Professor Franck, Nobel prize winner and teacher in Goettingen University, puts it, "Germans of Jewish descent."

Professor Franck's defiance of Hitler, resigning from the university which Hitler controls, and expressing his determination to remain and work in Germany, will interest the world.

Professor Franck fought four years in the big war, in the German army, and won the Iron Cross (First Class) for bravery, and, in addition, he won the Nobel prize in physics—a brave soldier, a great scientist. Mr. Hitler will find it hard to belittle that combination.

THIS IS MUSSOLINI, THE REAL ONE

Today we print two pictures that show the difference between the two dictators of Western Europe—Mussolini and Hitler. Few readers will have difficulty in answering the question at the top of this column: "Which is the REAL one?"

The upper picture shows Hitler striving to be another Mussolini, like the bullfrog in the fable puffing himself up trying to be another ox.

The lower picture shows the REAL MAN, the dictator who has what Americans call "the goods" stored away in his head.

You will see in Hitler's career a repetition of the old fable of the bullfrog and the ox. The bullfrog, trying to imitate the ox, blew himself up, swelling out, and finally exploded with a loud report. And he was much smaller than the ox at the time of the explosion.

Mr. Hitler in his striving to be another Mussolini will also explode. Just when, early history will tell you.

Life for Suffering Child

Not Death for an Old Suffering Man

In New York a two-year-old child was said by doctors to be in danger of death. Only an operation, removing one eye, could save her life. Her parents objected. New York's Appellate Court says the State has a right to save the life of a child, and doctors will operate, in spite of the parents.

The State now has the power to compel an operation to preserve a young life worth saving. How soon will it have power to permit an operation to end an old life which must be one of hopeless suffering? Many doctors would like that question answered.

For a long time England and Russia will be suspicious, scornful of each other.

The English in these times do not relish giving up Russian trade, but "face-saving" may compel it.

Russian authorities make it plain that they don't care what England or anybody else does, and are not afraid of ANYBODY. That is usual in times of revolutionary excitement. The French, from Mirabeau to Marat, defied the world and did it successfully. And then the Italian Corsican Bonaparte chained them and led them to be butchered where he pleased.
